

The TORCH "Self as an Elf" gift ideas Contest

If you've gotten somewhat disenchanted with the modern Christmas spirit, with two months of crass commercialism jammed into your eyes and ears, with pillow stuffed and cotton ladden Santa Clauses drumming up desires for Barbby dolls and G.I. Joe warriors, and you have some gift ideas to bring Christmas back to a personal level, we would like you to share your ideas and maybe make a few bucks.

Some of the best gifts, both to give and receive, can be made with your own two hands. The joy of giving something you have devoted personal time and energy in creating far surpasses the hassle of jamming elbows with thousands of other shoppers in pursuit of that elusive paisly tie.

So we would like to generate some gift ideas for both children and adults and also help finance some true Christmas spirit for resourceful people.

The TORCH is offering a $10 first prize and a $5 second prize for the best homemade gift ideas for Christmas.

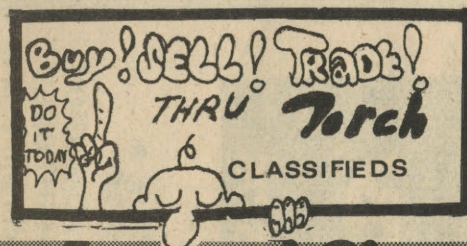

The gifts can be for either children or adults, and will be judged on simplicity of design, economy and creativity.

The funds for the cash prizes will come from the revenue the TORCH obtained through the sale of Duck Dope earlier this year.

Entries must be legibly written or typed and can be accompanied by a diagram or graphic illustrating how the gift is made. Entries must be submitted no later than noon on Monday, Dec. 8.

All ideas will be published in the Dec. 10 issue of the TORCH along with the names of the two winners.

So write down some of your favorite homemade gift ideas and maybe you'll win the money for the paisly tie you want to give your favorite uncle.

Senate Bill 1 rally hosts Frohnmayer, Porter

by Todd Johnstone

State Representative David Frohnmayer and former U.S. Representative Charles Porter were the featured speakers at a rally held in protest of Senate Bill 1 on Tuesday, Nov. 25 at LCC.

The rally, which was sponsored by the LCC and the Eugene committees to Stamp Out SB 1, was held outdoors near the LCC cafeteria and attracted an audience of over 100 people who voiced their disapproval of the bill.

Frohnmayer, a law professor at the University of Oregon, called SB1 "an issue which shocks everybody," and he said the bill threatens the "fundamental issues" of government in the United States.

Frohnmayer said that many people who represent the conservative viewpoint in United States politics oppose the bill and he pointed out that Sam Ervin has called SB1 "a hideous piece of legislation."

He said the "most shocking" part of the bill is its Nuremburg defense stipulation. He said "it would immunize a government official from criminal prosecution if he thinks his course of action is legal and he is acting on the orders of a superior." In some cases, he said this would make government officials immune to prosecution when they had violated the civil rights of citizens, and he used the defendants in the Watergate scandal as an example.

Frohnmayer also said that much in the bill is good and that he thinks it should be divided into five or six bills, but he said that he does not feel that the bill is amendable in its present form.

Charles Porter, a Eugene attorney and former congressional representative from the fourth district, addressed the audience and said "you are important and you can make a difference in this issue." Porter said SB 1 could do a lot of harm, but he added that he doesn't think that the bill will pass unless there is a series of sensational crimes which create a mood conducive to its passage.

Porter continued his address and described the United States as an elitist controlled society dominated by the people with money. Porter said that "dollars mean votes in this country," and that the United States is based on "equal justice according to income." Porter said that if SB 1 is enacted "it will substantially help the people in power stay in power and send back the people who are working for liberty in this country."

Porter also called for greater controls on the FBI and the CIA, the nationalization of "some aspects of the economy," tax reform and the redistribution of wealth.

Dave Straton, president of Hoedads, a co-operative tree planting organization, said that SB 1 will infringe on the rights of workers to strike against unsafe working conditions. He also called for people to "get off their rear ends and get rid of apathy and speak out against bills such as these."

Len Wassom, student body president of LCC, spoke against SB 1 and said the bill would destroy the freedom of the press, the right to privacy and the freedom of address.

Senate Bill 1 is a 753 page revision of the federal criminal code, which includes controversial provisions dealing with wire-tapping, the prosecution of public servants, the unauthorized release of classified material, the right to demonstrate, the death penalty, the use of marijuana, and the use of the insanity plea as a defense.

SB 1 is based on a report by the National Commission on Reform of Criminal Laws (Brown Commission, 1966-1971). The original Brown report was significantly modified during the Nixon Administration to include the provisions which have sparked the present controversy over the bill.

The 40 to 45 member group "is rapidly gaining recognition as one of the outstanding collegiate wind groups in the Northwest," according to its director, Gene Aitken.

This, says Aitkens, is why the symphony was invited to perform for the Oregon Music Educators Association Conference in Portland this past weekend.

The educators met at Portland State University to bring each other up to date on the standards, and concepts in music education in the state, says Aitkens. They listened to many high school bands from throughout the state in addition to the LCC musicians.

Between 40 and 45 students participate -- predominately non-music majors. Aitken explains that some of the symphony's members are P.E. majors, journalism majors and many others. A musician may become a member of the band by auditioning at the beginning of next term. Aitken says that while you need not be a music major "you should be fairly proficient with some wind instrument."

The Wind Symphony will play Thursday from 1:30 p.m. until approximately 2 p.m. in the LCC cafeteria and will perform five different compositions, by such composers as Louis Jean Brunelli, Walter Piston and Malcolm Arnold.

This will be the last performance by the symphony until after the Christmas break.

TORCH runs inaccurate headline

In this space in last week's TORCH there was a story about an ASLCC Student Senate meeting. The story carried a very inaccurate headline, which read "Student Senate condemns its director." The Student Senate did not condemn its director. There was a motion made by Dick LeClair calling for the immediate resignation of the ASLCC Advisor, Jay Jones, but the action was tabled. The senate took no official action on this motion other than to table it.

While there is no excuse for this mistake there is a reason. The original headline that was prepared for this story did not fit into the space allotted for it and the new headline was composed after the writer of the story had left.

We apologize to our readers for this mistake.

Also, last week's story did not report on a motion that was made by Dick LeClair to not expend any more money to Sally Torres (referring to a 100 dollar tuition reimbursement for last Spring Term. See TORCH story Nov. 26). The motion was tabled until a future meeting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ASLCC Veep rebuts headline, story

Editor,

I wish to respond to some things which appeared in the TORCH of November 26.

In this paper, there appeared a story under the headline, STUDENT SENATE CONDEMNS ITS DIRECTOR. Understanding that the headline is the most prominent part of any story, I believe that the headline should also correctly state the information to be covered in the story. This headline does not. The Senate has taken no action to condemn its director--in fact the story states that the motion was tabled. To state that such an action has taken place is unfair both to the Senate and to the Director.

In addition, the story was poorly reported, in that it gave unfair prominence to the attack on Mr. Jones, and really, for all intents and purposes, failed to report on what else occurred during the meeting. For example, the story failed even to note the other tabled motion (to not pay the tuition for Sallie Torres, which had been the crux of the half-page analysis immediately above). I have to question the idea of placing an editorial of that nature on the front page, and not to report on it. You end up with a badly slanted brand of journalism, that serves only the editor, and is more characteristic of a propaganda leaflet than a newspaper. I have previously attacked the TORCH rather severely for this type of irresponsible journalism. This time I do not attack, I only ask that the TORCH be more careful in the future--just as I must be more careful as an Executive Cabinet member.

Goodman voices embarrassment

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to air my grievance and express my embarrassment over the final form of the feature on Communism and Socialism, as it appeared in the TORCH, November 24.

This is not an attack against any member of the TORCH staff. My respect for Mike McLain and the staff is high, and I am pleased to be associated with them.

When I submitted the story, it was considered by the editor and TORCH Advisor to be disjointed. As I said, I respect them both, and had I been able to talk with them before press time, I believe we could have arrived at a final form for the feature that would have been an improvement upon the original. This meeting, however, was impossible to arrange. As a result, the editor and the TORCH Advisor made changes on their own, which included inserting material, deleting material, and especially rearranging material. In viewing the results, I can come to no other opinion than that they did very shoddy work.

The nature of the story, which appeared as an Option, was to feed information concerning a specific alternative in a useable form. At no time did I attempt to influence either pro or con except as a result of an honest representation of Communist and Socialist thought. I think an injustice was done to any reader who was unable to glean that information due to the editorial decision of the TORCH to gear it to the casual reader.

I disassociate myself from that injustice, and offer an apology to readers who were unable to examine the things I found important enough to share.

Sincerely,
Steven Goodman

Panel approves Winter Workshops

By Steven Goodman

Four proposed Workshop classes were approved for Winter Term by acclamation at a meeting Nov. 19, by the eight member panel chaired by Dean of Instructional Operations, Gerald Rasmussen.

Rasmussen opened the meeting by charging the panel to be strict--"With any luck the Education Coordinating Commission may not discover this for three or four more years," he said, alluding to the new Salem agency which has imposed a statewide moratorium on new classes. The LCC workshop concept, in which certain experimental classes are approved for one to two terms without state approval, is unique among the community colleges in Oregon and so far the ECC has left LCC's special concept untouched.

The four new workshops will be:

*Recording Studio Techniques

This class will be instructed by Mass Communication Department Chairman John Elliott and aide Samantha Gastineau, of KLCC. The class is restricted to students in Radio II courses, and will concentrate characteristics of mikes, acoustics, and "mixing" techniques. According to Elliott, students who do recordings of "Studio Session" at KLCC should have the skill to do it well.

*Real Estate Exchange and Taxation

The class will teach "creative financing." According to Jack Kreitz, chairman of the Business Department, "I think we've trained every Real Estate guy in town." This class will be taught by Robert Nelson, a staff member who expects between 60 and 80 students to enroll.

*Creative Ways to Teach Children

This class is offered as a college transfer class to persons working with young children. The class will be taught by Marilee Scheer, answering a request from the Child Care Training Task Force.

*Quantity Food Purchasing, Preparation and Equipment

This class is offered as the third in a series. It is now necessary for nursing homes to employ a staff dietician in order to qualify for Medicare or Medicaid funds. This course will lead to certification of students as dietitians. It will be instructed by Marilyn Ducich.

Members of the panel were Dean Rasmussen of the office of Instruction, Mary Jeanne Jacobsen, curriculum specialist, Mike Foy, instructor in the Mechanics Department, Vivian Day, Home Economics instructor, Nile Williams, associate dean of Community Education, Irene Parent, counselor and foreign student advisor, Joyce Hopps, associate dean of the Office of Instructional Operations, and Jim Pierce, associate dean of the office of Instructional Operations.

A proposed class in Latin American Studies, reported in the TORCH Nov. 19, was withdrawn prior to the meeting.

Ozark Mountain Daredevils to rock fairgrounds

by Max Gano

Starting out in Springfield, Missouri where they formed, this band has enjoyed the fruits of popularity in the past year as an alternative to the heavy metal and stage antics of such groups as Led Zeppelin and Alice Cooper, and one of their tunes, "Jackie Blue," even hit the Top-Ten.

They'll be playing at the Lane County Fairgrounds Dec. 4, at 8 p.m., and tickets are five dollars in advance and six dollars at the door.

You can buy tickets at Meier and Frank as well as at the Chrystalship if you hurry.

Having completed one European tour and now finishing in the U.S., the band is now planning to recross the Atlantic, and return to the land of its first success, where European writers went so far as to compare the Daredevils with the raw American power found in the works of Ernest Hemingway and Samuel Clemmings.

Though they don't "hurtle through hoops of fire on screaming two-wheeled chariots of doom," the Ozark Mountain Daredevils have, indeed, been climbing to the top.

Student Health Services takes day off

The Student Health Services will be closed on Wednesday, Dec. 10, and Wednesday Dec. 17 from 8 a.m. - 12 noon for special workshops that will be held during these times. Laura Oswalt, the director of Student Health services advises prospective users not to get sick before noon.

Women's Cultural X-change

Interested in Women's roles in other countries? Come to an informal luncheon and discussion, Noon to 1:00, Tuesday, December 9th, Room 223 Center.

Women from Hong Kong, Taiwan, Ireland, Iran, Saudi Arabia and Japan will be discussing women's roles in work, family life and other aspects of society.

Everyone is welcome.

A concerto in vitamin E_b

Lunch wasn't all that "got ate up" Thursday and Friday, November 20th and 21st, when the LCC Jazz Band's 1 and 2 put on a short series of lunch-time concerts that impressed many, and even left a few students breathless.

Since this was the first jazz band concert presented for LCC students this year, those who were new to this area probably didn't know whether to pick up their lunch and exit quickly when that stage was being assembled prior to the performance, or to stick around and listen.

Those who remained were pleasantly swept up and carried away on a wave of big-band power that left behind a roar of applause as the first tune ended. From that point, till the end of the extended show, the frenzy continued to build.

And it lasted through the final number, which the band had never seen before that day. Surprise rippled through the audience as the chart, which was borrowed from the South Eugene High School Stage Band's library earlier that day, was played without a hitch, as if it had been well practiced beforehand. This is an example of the musical discipline which Gene Aitken promotes in his program.

The first show on Thursday seemed to prompt many to arrive early on Friday, when the 2nd Lab was scheduled to perform.

Although there was marked contrast between band 1 and band 2, which is comprised of musicians a little less experienced, or perhaps just younger in musical years, the emphasis was on music and they performed it well.

Though this show was shorter than the previous afternoon, the audience showed their appreciation with enthusiastic applause and probably would have enjoyed a longer program. Perhaps in the future we'll see more of these musicians on campus.

Gene Aitken has done much for the music programs here at Lane, though he is just one of the instructors instrumental in initiating innovative new ideas.

Beginning on December 3rd, a concert will be presented on the first Wednesday of each month at noon.

Programs will vary, including both theatre and music. December's concert will be a "Noontime Buffet of Readings and Music" with recorder music and a flute concerto.

This is free to anyone and shouldn't be missed. You might be surprised at how good it really is.

December TJSO concert featuring Darensborough Jazz

By Max Gano

Clarinetist Joe Darensborough, of New Orleans, will be playing at the Rodeway Inn December 7, and will be backed by members of the Traditional Jazz Society of Oregon who are sponsoring the show.

The program, which will run from 1 to 6 p.m., and will be in the new convention hall, is a combination of Darensborough's show and jamm sessions interspersed.

Having played with performers such as Lionel Hampton, Pete Dally, Redd Fox, and Mike Riley, as well as having performed at Carnegie Hall, Darensborough, known as one of New Orleans finest clarinetists, is accredited with having helped to keep jazz alive during the 40's and 50's. Now he is a forefront leader in the current revival of traditional jazz.

Born in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, with the hope of playing in a circus band, Darensborough barely had a chance to fulfill that dream before he came to the West Coast in the 30's. Here he met musicians of a different accent, broadening his style and helping him to become what he is now, a legend.

But a living legend, and one that promises to charge the stage with a fine show. Admission is $1 for students and $2 for adults (non-students). The Rodeway Inn is located on I-5 just north of Eugene at the Beltline-West exit.

Youth Planning Committee to hold workshops

The Eugene Youth Planning Committee will hold a series of eight workshops this winter as a part of its study to determine the needs of young people in this area. The first one, dealing with education, will be held on Dec. 2 at Lincoln Community School (12th and Jefferson) from 3-5 in the cafeteria. For more information please call: 344-0391.
