greement reached in SRC dispute

by Allan Smolker TORCH Staff Writer

As a result of an Oct. 12 memorandum from the college administration to college managers, Student Resource Center (SRC) Director Bob Baldwin removed campaign materials from the SRC tables and his own desk in the foyer of the Center Building main floor.

Larry Warford, assistant to LCC President Eldon Schafer, wrote the memo which informed LCC management personnel of Oregon law ORS 260.432 that requires political materials be displayed only in designated places. Warford wrote ". . . These rules . . . make it clear that college . . . offices assigned to individuals, are not to be used to display such (political material)."

Baldwin, an LCC student and campaign worker for Mondale-Ferraro, says he received the memo on Oct. 17, and after speaking with ASLCC Adviser Jay Jones on Oct. 18 about the college memo, removed all political materials from the SRC area.

But Baldwin then complained to Congressman Jim Weaver's office, and to the American Civil Liberties Union about the college policy.

The question was, did Baldwin's desk in the SRC constitute an "office" and can the college legally require him to remove partisan materials from the desk?

Within the next few days, Baldwin and the college reached a settlement, so that campaign materials were replaced on the SRC display tables -but not on Baldwin's desk.

Claims of Pressure

Baldwin maintains the controversy started before the Oct. 12 memo, with a complaint from Social Studies Instructor George Alvergue, who is also the Lane County chair of the Hatfield Reelection Committee. Baldwin told student senators at the Oct. 22 ASLCC meeting that Alvergue put pressure on LCC's administration to remove the Mondale-Ferraro and Margie Hendriksen posters in the SRC.

Baldwin maintains he offered equal space to all parties in the SRC. He says the posters were on his desk because of a lack of space on the tables. Baldwin also claims it was not Alvergue's intent to get Hatfield material into the SRC area, but to get Hendriksen's campaign material out of the SRC.

But Alvergue told the Torch that Baldwin offered space to other candidates only after people complained. Alvergue told Baldwin he (Alvergue) might take his complaint to the LCC Board of Education. But Alvergue said, later, he informed Baldwin he wouldn't proceed with such an appeal to the board after all.

Torch Editorial Cited

ASLCC President Cindy

Weeldreyer says the controversy started on Oct. 11 -- before the college memo -- with an editorial in the Torch, critical of the political display on Baldwin's SRC desk, where the ASLCC-sponsored voter registration effort was taking

Baldwin and Jones Disagree

"When I discussed it (the political material) with Jay (Jones) ..." Baldwin said. "I said 'which material does this (memo) refer to?' He (Jones) said 'everything relating to anything that is going to be voted on.' I said 'does that include the material on the counters? He (Jones) said, 'Yes.' " Baldwin continued, "I took everything down that was going to be voted on, and (Congressman) called Weaver's office and the American Civil Liberties Union."

Jones Responds

Jones says, the Warford

memo was generated to answer questions asked by the LCC staff and was not written because of actions by Baldwin.

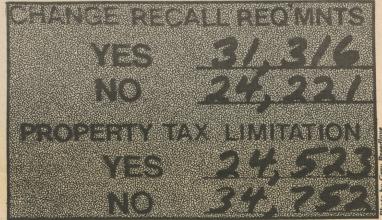

Jones told the TORCH, "I was the one that told Bob to remove the stuff (posters) from his desk. ... when he came to my office... and all the stuff was moved ... I (knew) immediately he had misunderstood. ... I walked over to the area (SRC) and I indicated what the policy meant. It only meant removal from the desk. I couldn't get Bob settled down long enough (to understand)."

Settlement a 'A Good One'

David Fidanque, the regional director of the ACLU, who advised Baldwin, says the settlement is a "good one."

As it now stands, political material cannot be displayed on the desk at SRC, but can be displayed on the counter. And if more space is needed LCC will provide bulletin boards.

Even though ballot measure one was approved, the fate of ballot measure two is still uncertain.

Auditions begin for 'Bus Stop'

by Brad Jeske for the TORCH

If the desire to act runs in your blood, this month is your chance to put that talent to work. Auditions will be held for "Bus Stop," the second play of the LCC Theatre season.

Stan Elberson, theatre instructor and director of this year's play says, "There are five men and three woman needed. Nothing has been precast, and all are encouraged. It's open to anyone who is interested." Elberson adds that auditioners don't have to be enrolled in a theatre class, or be LCC students.

"Experience is not necessary, just a strong desire to act," he says. "New people are always encouraged."

For those persons who are interested, Elberson says, "all you need to do is show up the night of the audition and read. And it's also a good idea to be familiar with the material." He adds he is looking for people between the ages of 18 and 60 for the 8 parts.

Auditions will be held Nov. 19, 20, and 21 at the LCC main stage at 7:30 p.m. Scripts are available at the library, but may be checked out for only one day at a time. They may also be purchased at the LCC bookstore.

Besides actors, Edberson is also looking for people to work backstage on set painting, lights, and props. Persons interested in these positions should contact Bruce Bibby or Skip Hubbard at the Performing Arts Building for more information.

"Bus Stop" is scheduled to run next term from Feb. 8 and 9. And then from Feb. 13 through the 16.

More than a dozen can-tion" as the nuclear arms race didates got a chance to air their views in a Last Chance Forum sponsored by the ASLCC on Friday, Nov.2.

The event, which was held in the cafeteria, attracted about a hundred spectators despite the Friday afternoon time slot and the lousy weather. Cindy Weeldreyer, ASLCC President, was pleased with the turn-out, saying she hopes it's indicative of student interest in subsequent ASLCC events.

Candidates made opening statements followed by questions from the audience, and then gave a short summation.

Congressman Jim Weaver pinpointed the "two fundamental issues in this elecand the state of the economy. He and opposition candidate Bruce Long also spoke about the state of the Oregon timber economy.

William Conde, write-in candidate for Secretary of State, spoke about a variety of topics including corruption in Norma Paulus' office, the failure of the Oregon Marijuana Initiative to get on the ballot, and his qualifications for Secretary of State.

Both candidates for Lane County Sheriff were present and incumbent Dave Burks was greeted with some hostility by the crowd. One audience member described this segment of the forum as "intense."

LCC Bookstore is jazzin' up merchandise

by Cindy Weeldreyer

for the TORCH

"The bookstore didn't look like this when I went here 11 years ago," remarked a former LCC student at the recent bookstore open house.

Responding to customer requests over the years and a desire to modernize the store, the bookstore now offers a variety of gifts and clothing to its customers.

In addition to the essential books and supplies, customers can purchase coffee mugs, stationery, clothing and other assorted items with the Lane Community College logo on

The bookstore now sells an entire line of colorful sports and casual wear clothing such as jazzy sweat shirts and pants, t-shirts, running shorts and jackets. "It's been a big success with a good response from staff and students," says Teresa Wathen, bookstore gift buyer.

Previous attempts at selling a limited amount of clothing in the store failed. Last fall the store management decided to carry a full line of fashions which proved so successful the line has been expanded this year.

Wathen has learned a few lessons about ordering and selling clothing. Designs have a lot to do with how well an item sells. Last year the slowest moving items had the least attractive designs on them. She stays away from fad clothing and has discovered that children's clothing sells best at Christmas. She has also learned that more clothing is sold when on sale, so she frequently marks items down 10 percent to move them.

Bookstore fashions are available in a variety of styles, colors, and sizes. Sweat shirts and t-shirt styles vary from short-sleeved and muscle-style sleeveless to hooded and longsleeved styles. nightgowns, and other items have some type of LCC design on them, a few have an Oregon design. Clothing items range in price from $5.95 t-shirts to $25.95 jackets. In addition, accessories like LCC baseball caps, socks, and bicyclists' ankle straps can also be purchased. Winning LCC logo designs from last spring's contest are now featured on coffee mugs and Imprinted merchandise costs more and the bookstore's line of imprinted items is competitively priced. Wathen commented, "The salesmen tell me that most stores mark up gift items 50 percent, and we only mark up articles 40 percent." Warthen added that there is a higher profit margin on gift merchandise than on textbooks.

It's a shame that certain practices are used against the women of our State by the male-domintated hierarchy of our public school systems to keep them from attaining a "comparable worth" for their chosen professions.

It's even more of a shame when the same people who control the purse strings of our State force "We the People" to have to go to court while they're wasting our tax dollars airing out Oregon's dirty laundry clear across the U.S. in Philadelphia. How many different times have our officials gone outside our state for different jobs which Oregonians could have done? How much has it cost us?

President Schafer visits China

by Ann Van Camp TORCH Staff Writer

Although Eldon Schafer will retire as LCC president next June, he will still continue to use his management knowhow. He will be serving as a member of an educational advisory group, headed by the World Bank (a specialized agency of the UN), to the People's Republic of China.

Having just returned from his second advisory visit in three years, Schafer says that the project will involve four more month-long trips to China through 1988. He's been working directly with the officials who are restructuring vocational education throughout mainland China.

"It really started two years ago when I went over as part of what was called an appraisal mission for the World Bank," says Schafer. At that time, the international group of seven members looked at facilities and equipment China would need to begin a national network of polytechnic colleges.

"As a result of that (visit), they are now getting international bids for the equipment," says Schafer.

Schafer says with a $130-million loan from the World Bank, the Ministry of Education in China will modernize 17 of the 70 existing colleges which are being converted to polytechnic status. Eventually, China plans to have a network of 700 such facilities.

The LCC president says China has spent several years determining how to best meet the vast educational needs of its population -- a population of 1 billion, 30 million people. The research included visits to various vocational programs around the world, as well as those of the United States. Two years ago, Schafer spent three weeks with a team of six from China which toured community colleges in this country -- including LCC.

"And when they finished, they felt that the community college had some elements they would like."

What intrigued the Chinese about community colleges?

"The technical training and the fact that they were shortterm (programs). Not four or five years, but one and two and three year programs," says Schafer. Getting more people trained more quickly, according to Schafer, is what the Chinese Ministry of Education wants to do.

"China has a tough road ahead of it," says Schafer. "They're leapfrogging from the thirties and forties into the eighties. They have few teachers. During the Cultural Revolution, all universities and colleges were closed and all the teachers were sent to the farms to work. Intellectuals were not to be trusted, so there were none."

The advisory project on which he is working is also establiching 28 television universities in China -- one in each province -- to be run much like the LCC telecourses.

"I think the government made a very wise decision. With few people educated, how could they educate 1 billion, 30 million people except to use technology?"

Schafer says course offerings are similar to those offered at LCC, "with great em-to go to China next fall for three months to conduct management training.

And in December he will be asked to identify US colleges where Chinese instructors might attend on fellowships. Those instructors will have scored high marks on a nationally-given exam in English. And, says Schafer, "I'll have to match the best location for each person coming over."

He says the reason for new emphasis on education in China is the country's change from a Communist society to a social society with a private enterprise system. "The government leaders have said, 'One country, two (economic) systems are possible'. . . . It will be interesting to see what's going to happen."

'One country, two (economic) systems are possible' phasis on the business-side of things." He also says other programs in demand are economic development programs, management training and computer training.

Schafer's part in the project this year is three-fold. First, the visit to the institutions in China took nearly a month. Then, over the next few months, he will select six or seven technical or community college presidents who would like Schafer went on to say, "I believe the Chinese tend to be followers and they follow their leaders very well. The leaders say, 'We will become more like a capitalist country' and -bang - they do it! They just have the ability to turn direction quicker than we can do in our country.

"The government can mandate programs (such as this one) and get away with it. And

KLCC seeks volunteers, offers valuable experience

by Mary Hunt
For the TORCH

Do the names Bob Zagorin, John Ethridge, Tracey Berry and Barbara Matt ring a bell? All are local broadcast professionals who began their careers at KLCC radio.

And what about John Hockenberry on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered," and CBS's Bebe Crouse?

They're radio and television pros involved at the national level -- again, KLCC grads.

KLCC's emphasizes on-thejob training for students and community members. In fact, 90 percent of the station's staff are volunteers who work in return for experience with music broadcasting, reporting, and writing news. Their work is, in a sense, their tuition.

"It's a system that could be very beneficial to people who have the drive, curiosity, and 'sticktuitiveness'," says Station Manager Jon Schwartz.

"We have everyone here from a lumberjack to a housewife to a professional broadcaster," he says. Some do it for a love of music or a hobby and others volunteer to help because it's part of their own training.

Since the spring of 1984, KLCC has been ranked as the ninth most popular public radio station in the country, says Schwartz, and has earned a reputation that makes for an impressive addition to a resume.

"Once in awhile, we have a person walk in and say, 'I wanna be a star rock DJ,' and that isn't exactly what we are about." Schwartz reminds the would-be volunteer that KLCC has a news and jazz format.

KLCC is now looking for volunteers to dedicate time and energy in exchange for experience. If interested, call KLCC -- 747-450l, ext. 2486.

Student Health Service recommends flu shots

by Monte R. Muirhead for the TORCH

If you're over 65 or suffer from serious, chronic medical problems, the Student Health Service (SHS) recommends that you be vaccinated for influenza virus.

This fall, 30 LCC students and staff members have been vaccinated, reports Sandra Ing, SHS director. People should receive the vaccine before mid-November, when the flu becomes more common.

Although the elderly and chronically ill are most vulnerable to flu -- which can be fatal to unvaccinated persons -- Ing says average, healthy people need the vaccination less, but should consider the option.

The vaccinations cost $5, and are available at the SHS from 8 a.m. to 12:30, and 1:30 to 4, Monday through Thursday, and from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday.

Ing says the vaccine is safe, but it's not 100 percent guaranteed. She notes, "Taking the vaccine is not going to prevent someone from getting the 2-3 day flu. It will protect you from influenza (a serious 7-10 day flu)." There might be some side effects such as fatigue and aching.

Good nutrition, plenty of rest, avoiding stress, and washing hands regularly are the best ways to prevent types of flu other than influenza, states Ing. She adds that even though viruses are transmitted through the air, medical specialists now believe viruses can be transmitted orally as well -- by touching objects handled by an infected person, and then touching the hands to the mouth.

Ing also stresses the importance of reducing normal activities when flu is contracted, until recovery is complete. She notes most people resume their normal activites as soon as they feel a little better, often this leads to reduced resistance to the illness, prolonging the recovery period.

China——(cont. from page 3) as a result they can improve."

Schafer says the Chinese people know they led the world in civilization for hundreds -- even thousands -- of years, but lost it because of their warring emperors over the centuries. "And now they sense that (loss), and they want to get back into the twentieth century.

"They want so to be like Americans -- it's almost scary. They all want to learn English. They all want to visit the United States."

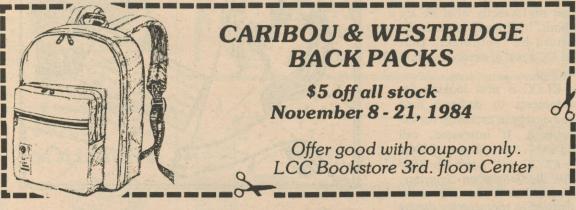

Schafer plans to do more fishing and golfing during his retirement but it sounds like he'll also help make an impact in the development of better education of China. And with that, he may indeed improve Chinese tourism to America as well.

Brown Bag Talks scheduled

by Steve Tenney
for the TORCH

The LCC Women's Program invites students and the public to attend weekly Brown Bag Talks -- luncheon discussions/lectures which cover a range of issues.

The topics are not strictly women's issues, but deal with the interactions between men and women, and their relationships with society.

Kate Barry, coordinator of the program, says this year topics will be planned by the term instead of by the year, allowing for more timely issues and unexpected guests. This term's schedule features Wednesday talks at noon, and Thursday talks at 11:30 a.m. in the LCC Boardroom.

On Wednesday, Nov. 14, Jean Rubel will deliver a lecture entitled "Success and Salvation Through Self Starvation," which focuses on anorexia nervosa.

The final Brown Bag talk be held on Thursday, Nov. 29, it focuses on "Restructuring Stress Creatively," a presentation by Judy Boyd Miller.

For more information about these talks, call 747-4501, extension 2352.

Career talks to be held

How will the Nov. 6 election results affect career prospects locally? Brian Obie, Eugene's mayor-elect, will offer his perspective in a career talk at Lane Community College on Thursday, Nov. 8.

The career talk is sponsored by LCC's Career Information Center. It is scheduled from 3 to 4 p.m. in Forum 307 on the main campus Career talks are a regularly scheduled service of the LCC Career Information Center. Another session is planned for Nov. 15, when a travel consultant will talk about work in travel agencies. That talk will run from 3 to 4 p.m. in Forum 307.

For more information about LCC's career talks, or about career information services available at the college, contact the Career Information Center at 747-4501, ext. 2297.

Clothing Exchange has free clothes

by Lisa Zimmerman for the TORCH

"You won't see a lot of 60's polyester with wild polka dots. We don't put anything out we wouldn't want to see someone wearing." says Kammy Sullivan, manager of the LCC Clothing Exchange.

In March of 1982, Campus Ministries first made free clothing available to LCC staff and students. Operating out of a box in the Center Building, with two volunteer employees, for four hours a week, the service became the Clothing Exchange.

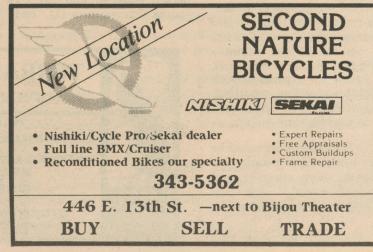

Now the Clothing Exchange is open Monday through Friday from 8 to 5, and has a staff of 22 work-study employees to help the 25-30 people who use the service each day. The staff includes four day managers, an assistant manager, and a full-time manager.

The Clothing Exchange currently puts out 1800 items of clothing each term, the success of the operation is due to increased organization, says Sullivan. Improvements include a smoothly run communications system which quickly and accurately transfers messages concerning needs and donations. Sullivan adds that bookkeeping, records, and the clothes are all up to date.

Currently the Clothing Exchange is doing well, but donations of men's and children's clothing, coats, and other winter clothes would be greatly appreciated, says Sullivan.

While the exchange is mainly for LCC students and staff, other people take advantage of the service. Marna Crawford, assistant director of Campus Ministry, notes the exchange has worked with local churches and other organizations to meet extreme needs.

Renaissance Room offers Classical Cuisine Dinner

by Richard Ho for the TORCH

The Renaissance Room is offering this term's Classical Cuisine Dinner - a Fall Harvest Special - in conjunction with the Nov. 15 performance of "Godspell" at the LCC Performing Arts Theatre. Dinner will start at 6 p.m.

Willie Keoloha, an instructor in the Food Service Managment Program which runs the Renaissance Room, promises to transform the northwest section of the cafeteria. "The lights will be turned down, the tables rearranged, and there will be tablecloths and cloth napkins."

Dinner will begin with an appetizer of Phyllo Seafood Surprise -- shrimp, crab, snapper and possibly even scallops wrapped in phyllo pastry (the same pastry used to make Baklava). This will be followed by an entree of Supreme of Chicken au cognac -- chicken flambed in cognac -- accompanied by sauteed peas, tomatoes and mushrooms.

Since the dinner will be served French-style, the salad will be served after the entree. The Mandarin Spinach Salad is a vinegarette based dressing tossed with bite-sized spinach, and topped with slices of Mandarin orange.

The salad serves to "clear the palate" before feasting on the dessert! Black Forrest Cherry Torte completes the meal.

Kealoha assures diners that dinner will be finished by 7:30 p.m., permitting time to relax and chat, or to take a stroll before crossing the green to the LCC Performing Arts Theatre to see "Godspell."

The dinner is priced at $10 a person. Kealoha says, "The entree and salad alone will cost about $16 at a restaurant offering the same type of service in town." Guests may purchase wine by the glass to accompany the meal.

The Classical Cuisine Dinner is offered once a term and about 120 people are expected. Ticket information can be obtained by calling 747-4501 ext. 2519. Tickets for the dinner should be purchased by Nov.

Renaissance Room patrons enjoy their luncheon.

LCC Community Ed. versatile

Community education means many different things at Lane Community College.

It means outreach centers, continuing education, job training, business assistance, and other educational programs designed to meet a wide variety of community needs.

On Tuesday, Nov. 13, LCC will celebrate national Community Education Day.

The observance will include presentations of LCC's 20th anniversary slide show, at the LCC Downtown Center, 1059 Willamette St. in Eugene. The public is invited to the presentations—on the hour, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and again at 8 p.m.

Throughout LCC's 20-year history, the college's Community Education Division has grown and changed. In the first year of operation, Community Education served the equivalent of 297 full-time students--6,732 registrations-with 201,960 hours of instruction. In the 1983-84 year, the LCC Community Education Division served the equivalent 2.074 full-time students--46,920 registrations--with 1,407,600 hours of instruction.

Community education at LCC is multidimensional. A wide variety of classes are offered, different teaching methods are used, and the college's resources and services are tailored to community needs

For more information about LCC's community education programs, persons should consult the class schedule or call LCC at 484-2126.

Egg Drop

Today at noon eggs will start dropping from the Math and Arts Building as part of an annual event in David Joyce's Introduction to Visual Arts.

LCC honor society plans trip to Coast

Sigms Zeta, LCC's chapter of Phi Theta Kappa honor society, will be hosting the first annual retreat for Oregon Chapters at Heceta Head, November 9-11 on the Oregon Coast.

The 3-day weekend overnighter will include the Oregon Executive Board meeting on the 9th and an armful of fun activities, including a lighthouse tour, shell hunts, Friday-night potluck, a drive to Newport, a visit to the OSU Marine Science Center, horseback riding, kite flying, and midnight walks on the beach under the moonlight with Phi Theta Kappa friends! And more!

Current members, alumni, and provisional members are all invited to this coast escape. A registration fee of $15 per person will cover the trip plus meals at the historic Heceta House. Plans are made to leave Eugene at 6 p.m. after classes on Friday and return Sunday evening.

Contact President Larry Mann at 746-8006 for more information and to let us know you'll be joining us!

Godspell returns for tenth anniversary

"Godspell" will begin a second decade of performances in the LCC Performing Arts Theatre on Friday, Nov. 9.

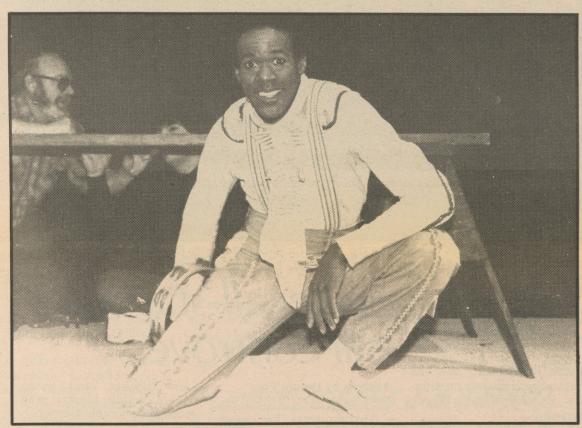

The show's Director, Ed Ragozzino, christened the theater ten years ago with the same show and even managed to recruit three of the original cast members for this anniversary rendition.

Original cast member David Morgan has taken a leave from careers as an actor and photographer in New York City to again play Jesus, and Roger Reid returned from Los Angeles to be in the upcoming production. Roxy Thomas Ragozzino, who resides in Eugene, is the third original cast member to return for these shows.

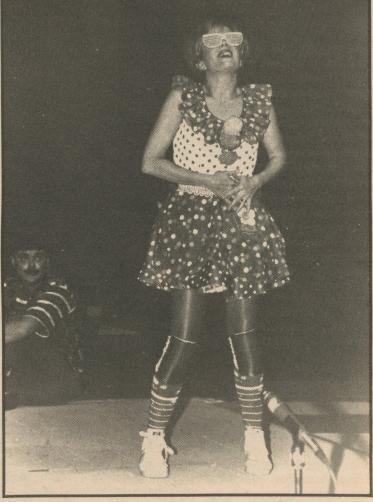

Newcomers to this company are Shirley Andress, Rose Clark, Richard Gray, Peg Major, Patrick Michalek, Marla Mise, and Al Villanueva. Music Director James B. Greenwood Jr. directs a combo from his piano (Eddy Rodriguez-Morel - guitar, Pat Brand - bass, and Brent Jasmer - percussion). Bruce Bibby is the set and lighting designer, Nancy Julian created the costumes, Nicola Foster choreographed the show, and Dan Sachs was the vocal coach.

Ragozzino founded LCC's Performing Arts Department in 1968. Until 1974 the department used the Center and Forum Buildings to stage plays. Since then, Ragozzino says Performing Arts has "quadrupled at least" in terms of course offerings, FTE, and personnel.

Arts has "quadrupled at least" in terms of course offerings, FTE, and personnel.
"Godspell" is a musical treatment of the life and teachings of Jesus, as presented in the Gospel of St. Matthew. It will play on Nov. 9 and 10 and again from Nov. 14-17. All shows have an 8 p.m. curtain time and ticket cost is $8. Reservations may be made by phoning 726-2202 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Groups of 25 or more will receive a 25 percent discount.

L.A. resident Roger Reid returns for the ten year anniversary performance.

LCC men's soccer team remains at the top of the NAACC's Southern Division after managing another split last week, a loss to Tacoma 3-1

Wash. 4-0.

Ft. Steilacoom also split last week which keeps both teams tied for the league's lead with 7-4-1 records.

and a win over Edmonds of

On Oct. 31, LCC dominated the first 30 minutes of the game against Tacoma, but failed to score until late in the game.

Dennis Perkins took advantage of a Lane defensive miscommunication to score Tacoma's first goal at the 33 minute mark.

Tacoma's scored its second goal on an indirect free kick at the 40 minute mark, and Jeff Laybourn finished Tacoma's scoring at the 55 minute mark.

Lane's lone goal came late in the second half on a kick by Gunnar Runarsson.

"We've been playing around with different defensive combinations, which is the reason for our letdown," Head Coach Dave Poggi explained. "Due to injuries we are playing with a totally different defense than we started with at the beginning of the year.'

Poggi feels he has found the combination to iron out the problems as the Titans shut out Edmonds of Wash. 4-0.

Playing in a mud bath after Saturday morning's storm, Gunnar Runarsson scored his first goal four minutes into the game off an assist from Pat Bodine. Runarsson added his second goal three minutes later on a breakaway to give Lane a 2-0 lead.

Soccer

With 30 seconds left in the half, Bodine made it 3-0 with a 20-yard kick off an assist from forward Ron Gullberg. Eric Laakso added Lane's final goal on an assist from Frank Hofford with two minutes left in the game.

The first place teams in the north and south divisions will get a first round playoff bye and automatically reach the semifinals in Auburn, Wash., so Lane's next contest, and probably the biggest game of the year, will be on Nov. 7, against Ft. Steilacoom. "Each game is a must win for us, regardless of how the other teams do," Poggi commented.

Lane will then travel to Bellevue on Nov. 10 and then play at Portland on Nov. 14.

LCC spikers take third

by Darren Foss
TORCH Sports Writer

The LCC volleyball team completed a successful trip to Yakima, WA this weekend by placing third in the Cross-Over Tournament held there Friday and Saturday Nov. 2-3.

Lane opened the tournament Friday night with a win over Walla Walla CC 15-12, 15-11, 9-15, but then was upset by Highline CC 2-15, 7-15, 3-15.

The team bounced back on Saturday winning two of its three matches. The Titans defeated Linn-Benton CC 13-15, 15-2, 15-4 then put up a tough battle against Mt. Hood as they won the first game 15-10, before losing the next two, 11-15, 8-15. Then in the match for third place Lane defeated Walla Walla again, this time in two straight games easily, 15-4, 15-5 to win the third place plaque.

Coach Cheryl Brown commented, "We played very well, our primary objectives for this weekend were to get out of our slump as far as noncommunication and to play together as a team and we definitely accomplished our goals in this tournament."

The team played consistenly good volleyball throughout the tournament despite the fact that one of its key starters, Shari Petrushkin, didn't play at all this weekend due to illness. This proved the team doesn't fall apart when one of its key players is missing.

"Another one of our objectives for the tourney was to place, which we did getting third and bringing some hardware home to show for it." said Brown.

Statistically, Patty Brooks led the team with 35 kills and also had 10 stuff blocks. Susan Moore led the team in stuff blocks with 12, and had 31 kills; Darleen Murray led the team with 66 assists, and Joan Haffner set a team record with seven ace serves in one game.

Murray, the Titans' leading setter, commented, "We are definitely playing better. We got it together, and played well all weekend."

This was Lane's last regular season tournament, now the team can concentrate on winning its remaining league

Lane played against Clackamas, here, yesterday but results weren't available by presstime. Tomorrow, the team takes its 20-15-3 overall record up to Albany to face the struggling Linn-Benton team. Lane has already defeated them three times this season, a victory will keep Lane tied with SWOCC for second place with a victory. Saturday the team plays another road game at Mt. Hood CC in Gresham, where LCC will try to gain ground on the undefeated Saints.

"It's going to be a tough last two weeks of league play," said Brown. "We're looking forward to a good show down with Mt. Hood on Saturday and next Wednesday we'll play our last home game against SWOCC. That will be the battle for second place in league."

Spiker all-star votes stir controversy

Analysis by Darren Foss

A controversy has arisen over the NWAACC's method of selecting volleyball all-stars.

Currently, the coaches vote during the middle of the league season for their all-star selection, a practice which may be unfair to women who improve at the end of the season. Most leagues vote for their all-stars at the end of the season, thus overall season performance is considered, which seems appropriate.

LCC Volleyball Coach Cheryl Brown states, "When we vote so early in the season, not every team has had the opportunity to view its opponents so they don't know who they are voting for. There's definitely a couple girls on our team that should have made the first team."

However, only three Titan players were recognized by the league, and none were selected as a first team all-star. Shari Petrushkin, who has led the Titans in kills almost all season as a middle blocker -- and should have been a definite first team all-star -- was only recognized as a second team all-star. The only other recognition LCC received was in all-around player, Lori Glocker, and Susan Moore, middle blocker, who received honorable mention.

The team is very young, but as the season has progressed, the women have improved. By the end of the season many of them could be first team players, unfortunately, with the all-star voting at midseason they don't receive their due recognition.

Most of the first team is dominated by players from league leader Mt. Hood and second place Southwestern Oregon. However, LCC has been a consistent second place team in the league nearly all season, but didn't receive one first team all-star selection.

"I was really disappointed with it (the method of selecting early), but I don't know what to do about it. We're bringing it up in a meeting for future reference maybe in the future we will select them at the end of the season," exclaimed Brown. "It definitely effects the girls that should be there."

However, Brown did point out that during the regional play-offs they vote for playoff all-star team, if that's any consolation to the girls that missed the earlier all-star team.

Women hoopsters have talent

by Ron Gullberg

A smile lit LCC women's basketball coach Sue Thompson's face when sophomore guard Dee Vinberg dribbled down the court in a two-ontwo drill at Tuesday's practice and slid the ball behind her back for sophomore center Shari Rose to lay-in.

In the background a ghettoblaster lay on the gym floor pounding out pop music as a soundtrack to the relaxed, smooth practice.

Thompson is optimistic about her team's chances this season, which begins at Centralia Community College Saturday, November 24.

She should be. Three starters, including Rose (6' 10'', Springfield High School), Vinberg (5' 7'', Kodiak, Alaska) and guard Dawn Smoot (5' 8'', Silverton), are returning from last year's impressive 17-9 team, and a bright corp of freshmen are making the women hoopsters complete.

"This year we're very well balanced," said Thompson. "We have excellent outside shooters in our guards, three strong guards, and the potential to be a fast break club. We're a lot quicker."

Thompson is pleased with her squad's awareness. "They're really smart. They see options and capitalize on them.

"Sometimes teams get structured, but our team is freelance, and we capitalize on defensive mistakes. We don't want to be predictable."

Rose, named to last season's first team region four all-stars, remains a key to how far this year's squad can go. "Shari is probably the premier player in the league this year," says Thompson. "She is stronger (than last season), and plays smarter."

Joining the returners is center Liz Turner (5' 11", Cottage Grove). Freshman Trina Travess (5' 4" guard, Springfield) has emerged as a pleasant pre-season surprise for Thompson. "Trina, at this point, is probably a top potential starter. She is obviously well-coached and has excellent ball sense."

Freshman center-forward Christi Viltz (5' 10", The Dalles) is Thompson's sleeper. "I think she's dynamite (Viltz)," said Thompson. "By the end of the year she'll surprise many people."

Three volleyball players will add even more depth to Thompson's squad once their season concludes by December first. Thompson feels Shari Petrushkin (5' 9'' guardforward, Crow), Lori Glockler (5' 4'' guard, Springfield) and Rene O'Bryant (5' 10'' forward, Fern Ridge Christian) will be in game shape by Lane's league opener.

Women's Basketball

Joining Thompson in the coaching ranks will be returning Assistant Coach Dave Loos. Loos is Thompson's first returning assistant and she feels it will be an added boost to her already talented team. "Having Dave will be a real plus for us. He has a good rapport with the students and we have a good chemistry between us. He also knows our system now."

Another twist to this new season is the change in the women's basketball's size. Nationwide, in the collegiate and professional ranks, women's teams will be using basketballs one inch smaller in diameter and one ounce lighter.

"We love it," said Thompson referring to the new ball. "Studies were made and the new ball created one-third to one-quarter less turn-overs per game."

"I think it's wonderful the sport did something to adjust to the women's smaller handsize."

With Thompson's dominating centers and quick ball-handling guards, the music may keep playing all season.

LCC's Athletic Director Sue Thompson has heard the gripes by the coaches, supports their position, and will propose a change in the allstar selections for next year according to Brown.

A few of the women that have led Lane much of the season who were overlooked by the all-star team include: Darleen Murray, who led the team in assists as a setter and is one of the top players in the league; Angela Arms, also a setter, who has been a strong force in the Titan's offense; and middle blocker Patty Brooks, who has been strong at nailing the kill shot.

Class paints faces

by Teri Beedon

for the TORCH

If you think Halloween is for kids, you probably haven't taken LCC instructor Mery Lynn McCorkle's Basic Design class.

McCorkle's class isn't all fun and games, but one day last week -- two days before Halloween -- her class project was face painting.

McCorkle said when the Color Theory class students painted their faces last year, it was so successful that she decided to give it a try this term with the Basic Design students, who worked in black and white. This project was originally scheduled for earlier in the term, but McCorkle rescheduled it closer to Halloween. The only requirement for the project was that the designs be asymmetrical, since this was the type of design the class was exploring.

Students put black or white clown make-up on their faces, and then carefully painted on designs they had already sketched out on paper.

Student Pat O'Neil, painted as a cyclops, said "It's Halloween, you're supposed to get laughed at." Kevin Stacey reminisced about his early days as an artist, "Isn't Halloween fun? I remember doing this in first grade I thought this was college."

Star Holtham changes her image in Basic Design.

Harriers at NW championship

Lane Community College's men's and women's cross country squads, fresh from sweeping the Oregon region four state championships Saturday, Nov. 3, headed for Spokane, WA Wednesday to compete in the Northwest Championships.

Ann Macklin, the first freshman to ever win the women's state cross country title, will be joined by teammates Jennifer Pade (fifth at state), Susan Alonso (eighth), Janelle Henderson (ninth), Stacey Cooper (10th), Kris Edwards (12th) and Nicole Riker (16th).

The men will be spearheaded by freshmen Don Beecraft and Jeff Evers, fourth and fifth, respectively, at state, and Brace McGillivary (eighth), Erick Landeen (ninth), John McCarfey (11th), Steve Smith (15th) and Matt Doty (19th).

Friday's meet will start at 11 a.m., with last season's champions; Bellevue Community College, the early favorites.

Talk explores Premenstrual Syndrome

Premenstrual Syndrome (PMS) is a hormonal disorder some people really don't believe exists. Two people who do believe it does, will speak about the syndrome in a free talk at Lane Community College's Downtown Center on Friday, Nov. 9 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in Room 302.

A husband-and-wife team from Portland -- Phillip S. Alberts, M.D., and Suzanne L. Alberts, R.N. -- will discuss the causes, symptoms and diagnosis of PMS, as well as forms of treatment.

The Alberts say that PMS may affect up to 90 percent of women today, whatever their background, race or age. They add that for 10 percent of those afflicted, PMS is serious enough to cause disruption of their personal and professional lives.

Some of the more common PMS symptoms include fluid retention, abdominal bloating, and headaches with emotional symptoms including irritation, anger and a feeling of being "out of control," according to the Alberts.

Dr. Alberts says PMS has no cure, but sufferers can learn to live with it. The Alberts are affiliated with a Portland treatment center for PMS, and travel around the state discussing the syndrome.

This lecture is part of Community Education Day activities which falls on Tuesday, Nov. 13. For more information call Sheila Gardipee at 747-4501, ext. 2617.

FOURTH and MADISON

This is the sixth in a continuing series of excerpts from a history of the Eugene Vocational School, one of LCC's predecessors. The book was published by David Butler of the LCC College and Community Relations Office, and reprinted by permission. Copyright, 1976, by Lane Community College.

Anyone who has ever tried to learn a skill or craft can testify to the importance of being taught by a person who can unmystify the mysterious.

While Purvine was beating the bushes looking for instructors, the school put the word out it was looking for students to fill the new classes. It was a gamble. No one was sure whether people who had worked hard all day would be willing to give up their evenings to sit in a classroom. Adams and the others kept their fingers crossed while the Register-Guard continued to plug the program on its inside pages. And around town, a few workers here and a few workers there made plans to attend.

Some, like the painters and paper hangers union local, agreed to attend enmasse if an instructor could be found who could teach them wood graining and special effects. Purvine finally found one in Portland.

The big night drew closer. It was near the end of March, 1938 and the Eugene Vocational School was less than a month old, ready to take its first big step.

Adams was nervous as a cat for he knew that a failure here could damage the school beyond repair. It was on probation anyway, and one slip-up would be all the vocational education opponents (there was still a sizable force of them in Eugene) would need to start a campaign against the school.

Nobody remembers the exact date the night classes began; late March is the best guess. No matter. It only matters that on the night they did begin, Adams drove down from Salem for one last pep talk with his staff. Lillian Van Loan remembers it well.

"O. D. called us into one of the empty classrooms to tell us what he expected of us, and what we could expect from the students. He must have talked for ten or fifteen minutes from up in the front of the room. Those of us in the back could hear people shuffling around out in the halls, but O.D. couldn't. He was too far away.

"He finally finished talking and then looked at us for a second and said very sadly, 'well, it doesn't look like anyone is coming anyway'."

Adams was ready for the worst but he wasn't ready for what awaited him in the hallways of old Geary.

As the door opened and the staff filed out, the halls were jammed. More than 300 students had showed up, more than anyone had ever expected.

The gamble had paid off and the Eugene Vocational School had, in about one month, established itself as a presence in the community. Now it had some breathing room.

Success of the night program was vital in other ways too. There was a war going on in Europe and the economy here was picking up. A few more Help Wanted ads were appearing in the Register-Guard's classified section. Jobs—nonexistent for nearly a decade—were reappearing; mills added extra shifts, people were beginning to work again. The Depression—though still a dark cloud over the nation—showed ever-so-slight signs of weakening. The Eugene Vocational School was filled with people determined to beat the Depression at its own game—when it showed a weak spot, a trained worker would jump in.

And there was the matter of planning. Adams was a meticulous planner. The success of those first night classes gave him the edge he was looking for. In Salem, he again began moving in legislative money circles and on April 7 appeared before the Board of Education in Eugene to announce a $2,000 increase in the operating budget.

The budget he passed among Board members MacLaren, Love, Morris, Dodds and Payne showed income of $22,000, of which $15,000 came from the State Department for Vocational Education, $6,000 from student fees at $20 each, and $1,000 from a federal grant. Expenses included $15,000 for salaries, $5,300 for new equipment and $1,700 for general supplies. The Geary School was valued at $25,893.13.

At the same meeting, the Board informally approved a request by Adams and Cramer for the District to provide heat, light, power and water for the school from what then was called the Eugene Water Board.

By this time—late Spring 1938—Adams was pushing himself day and night. He, Mrs. Van Loan, Purvine and the others were already preparing for the opening of the next school year. The course list would be expanded, new teachers hired. More daytime classes would be held.

On the drawing board for fall 1939 were classes in aviation mechanics, barbering, clay modeling, copper smithing, custom dressmaking and millinery, hair-dressing, heating and ventilating, jewelry making, leather craft, metal casting and spinning, model building, office training, plaster casting, plumbing, production principles, radio studio work, retail selling, and sheet metal.

Let us do the work for you.
