Former LCC Dental Hygiene student files complaint

by Ellen Platt
TORCH Associate Edito

Vicki Ramaglia, a former LCC Dental Hygiene student filed a complaint regarding her treatment in the program during Winter term of 1982 and presented her case to an LCC hearings committee on Monday, April 27.

Ramaglia, Dr. Douglas White - head of Health Occupations, and Judy Blue - Dental Hygiene instructor, made their statements before an informal hearings committee composed of LCC administrators, staff, and students.

Ramaglia, who initiated the complaint process last May 17, delayed filing her complaint because she "wanted to get a Computer Programming degree (at LCC) and was afraid of retaliation." She also felt the administration had not been helpful, or expedient in pursuing her complaint.

Ramaglia seeks a refund of her tuition ($400) and student loan expenses of $1666, plus 9 percent interest; removal of the 7-credit F grade in Dental Hygiene; a written apology from the Dental Hygiene department for "their neglect and lack of concern on my behalf;" a written apology from the LCC Administration for "their neglect and lack of concern" in investigating the situation and acting; and regular, anonymous evaluation of instructors by students

Bill Mullin receives 'Innovator' award

by Linda McDonald
TORCH Staff Writer

Bill Mullin is a special sort of instructor -- at least that's what the League for Innovation believes because they have awarded him the Innovator of the Year Award for 1985. As I interviewed Mullin with his gracious but temporary bass voice, (due to a cold) I began to see some of the characteristics that denote this person as a total giver in the field of education.

Mullin's excited enthusiasm and down-to-earth rapport with his students gives one a sense that this man genuinely likes being in the classroom.

He tells his students about how he decided to give up a sales career with a six-digit income and go into teaching because he wanted something more fulfilling. After watching the interaction between Mullin and his students, it would be hard to determine who is reaping the greatest rewards from his career change.

The dictionary describes an innovator as one who begins something new. And that is exactly what Mullin has done.

He and two associates, Jim Keizur and Mick Cheshire, have devised a computerized testing system called Computer Message Instruction System, or CMI. The way the system works is that it is fed and stores objective-type questions. An instructor can pull out a set of 20-100 questions to be used on any given test. This set of questions is then available to students as they come into the computer lab to take the test.

The benefits of the CMI are many, but primarily it frees the instructor to use classroom time for instruction -- as the student takes the exams for that particular class on his own time. The CMI can be used as a teaching unit by allowing students to take the same test as many as six times, and reinforcing the material to be learned.

Perhaps the greatest timesaving advantage of all is that the system does most of the paperwork for the instructor. Within seconds, it can prepare a printout with each student's name and test score, and show the curve for each test in the class.

The CMI also has message capacity. If an instructor needs to see a student about something, the message can be entered into the computer so that when that student comes in to take a test, the message will flash on the screen.

To my delight, Ann Bacon, Supervisor of the Center Computer Lab, sat me down to sample this mechanical genius. Being a complete novice at computers, I skeptically sat down and ordered up a Social Science test. After getting two out of three questions right, I was hooked.

Bacon said that she has observed a decrease or even elimination of "exam jitters" by students taking the test on this system. And that it saves department secretaries a huge amount of time because they don't have to type up each

National panel ranks LCC in top five

Schafer surprised by award

Lane Community College has been named one of the country's five outstanding community colleges, a distinction LCC President Eldon G. Schafer says "is an exceptional recognition of the fine work that's been going on at Lane for many years."

Schafer announced the national recognition during a retirement reception held for him by college staff Wednesday afternoon. Schafer retires this July after 15 years at LCC.

LCC and the other top community colleges were selected for such factors as student success, strong presidential leadership, teaching excellence, and national recognition. The ranking resulted from a study coordinated by Dr. Hohn Roueche, a professor at the University of Texas-Autsin.

"This ranking was an exceptionally pleasant surprise," Schafer says. "It's not surprising to us that we meet the criteria for excellence. It is surprising that national experts rank us at that level."

In the top five, LCC joins Miami-Dade Community College of Miami, Florida; Jefferson Community College in Louisville, Kentucky; De Anza College in Cupertino, California; and Central Peidmont Community College of Charlotte, North Carolina.

A national panel of 14 experts in community college education helped rank the colleges in a survey conducted by the Community College Leadership Program at the University of Texas-Austin.

With the other top colleges, LCC was picked by the national panel because it:

- is recognized nationally for student success;
- recruits and develops students while maintaining and improving quality (access and excellence);
- has strong presidential leadership, especially toward instruction; and
- selects, evaluates, and rewards exceptional teaching in keeping with the comprehensive mission of the community college.

"This recognition means more than the many awards Lane has received over the years," Schafer says. "This stands especially high in my estimation because experts from every one of the major colleges that teach community college education established the criteria and ranked the institutions."

KLCC CORRECTION

In the April 11 edition of The Torch we printed a mistake relating to KLCC funding. KLCC does not receive $40,000 a year from money awarded to OEPBS as the article stated. Station Manager Jon Schwartz says the station receives almost $40,000 from the federal Corporation for Public Broadcasting but no money at all from the State of Oregon. FORUM FORUM

Meet your candidates and vote on May 6 and 7

Forum by Cindy Weeldreyer
ASLCC President

By now you are aware that it's campaign week at LCC as four presidential candidates vie to be my successor. The ASLCC Senate is facing a serious budgetary challenge next year -- as many LCC departments are -- so talk with each candidate and discover his or her strategy to meet this challenge.

I believe the ASLCC president should not use his or her elected power to influence an election. Therefore, I am not endorsing any candidate and leave the responsibility with you to be an informed voter. All four candidates are sincere in their desire to serve you and make the ASLCC even better. For whatever reason, only a handful of candidates filed for other senate positions so there are numerous write-in candidates in the election this year.

Next Monday and Tuesday - May 6 and 7 - you will vote for candidates and two ballot measures. Both measures, if passed; would strengthen student government for many years. With the entire college experiencing budget cuts, you need a strong student government - now more than ever - to ensure the inevitable cuts don't fall squarely on your shoulders.

Ballot Measure 1

A proposal to increase the mandatory student body fee from $3 to $5 per term, this is necessary for three reasons:

- A $6,246 cut in our budget by the college administration,
- Reduced enrollment -- our major revenue source and
- Increased operating costs due to inflation.

Your current senate realizes that college costs are increasing and we are lobbying hard to defeat proposed cuts in federal financial aid. We also realize that unless you maintain a strong student government the costs and cuts will continue to increase without student input.

We provide numerous programs and services for LCC students and - even with the increase - have one of the lowest student activity fees in the state. Should the fee increase proposal fail, many of the excellent programs we've created in the last fifteen years must be eliminated.

The LTD bus pass subsidy, the free telephones, and legal services would be discontinued -- services used by the majority of the student body. (Legal services would continue until the contract expires in 1986.)

The Student Resource Center would experience a 50 percent reduction along with the ASLCC secretary and club funding -- elements of student government which set us apart from the other Oregon community colleges. Election funding would also be cut in half. Historically, ASLCC elections were often poorly run -- a problem recently solved by increasing that budget and hiring more student workers.

I've attended monthly student association (CCOSAC) meetings this year and, having viewed how student governments are run in other Oregon community colleges. I believe we have a lot to be proud of here at Lane. Please help preserve the precious autonomy ASLCC has worked hard to achieve for you in the past 10 years and vote YES of ballot measure 1.

Ballot Measure 2

This measure is an effort to increase student input by creating a student advisory committee (SAC) as a permanent part of student government. If passed, the ASLCC Constitution would direct the ASLCC president to establish a SAC each fall, composed of student representatives from every LCC department and student club.

This group would meet at least once a term to provide direct communication between the senate and LCC departments and student clubs. At this time all senate members hold at-large positions and departmental representation is sporadic.

If you currently have concerns about budgets cuts or instructional quality in your department, please contact your department representative -- if you are unsure of who your representative is, contact your department office or the ASLCC office.

The next meeting of this term's SAC is Thursday, May 9 at 8 a.m. Your SAC reps have asked me to encourage you to get your comments, suggestions and concerns to them before that meeting. I plan to compile this information and present it to the ASLCC senate and college administration for action.

This committee is a very positive vehicle to bring your suggestions and concerns to the attention of someone who can act on it. It is to your advantage to make this SAC a permanent part of student government -- especially with the upcoming college-wide budget cuts. I therefore encourage you to vote YES on Ballot Measure 2.

The 1984-85 ASLCC Senate members devoted much of their time and energy this year to provide you with a wide variety of programs and services. WE appreciate and thank you for your support and urge you to meet the candidates and please vote on May 6 and 7.

Jerked around as soccer downed

To the Editor:

The soccer team at LCC would like to share its experiences over the past four months regarding the proposed elimination of soccer at LCC.

Since December of 1984, LCC student athletes began hearing rumors of such a cut. When members of the team approached Dr. Fred Loveys, head of Health, Physical Education, and Athletics, and Jack Carter, vice president of Student Services, about the cuts, they would not give us a straight answer. Was it in their plans to jerk us around for a term and a half to ensure that the out-of-town student athletes had paid for their final term of tuition? Or was it simply that Loveys and Carter are unable to make "low" level administrative decisions?

It would appear that the administration forgot the basic rule of education: That the needs of the tuition payers ought to be considered before anything else. Many student athletes could've looked for education at another institution instead of waiting around for an overdue decision.

We understand that with Lane County's present economic problems cuts must be made. However, we will never understand why LCC won't let the soccer team participants fund their own program.

Perhaps our new president will see to it that prompt and fair decisions will be made in the future for the good of all students.

I endorse Martin Lewis

To the Editor:

The student government can have an affect on the personal growth of a student and enrich his life at LCC.

I've come to depend on the free phone provided by the ASLCC to call for job interviews. I've had coffee many times at the Women's Awareness Center when I needed a friendly ear and a little advise. I would hate to see these services disappear; but they may with a shrinking budget and declining enrollment.

We need a student body president who has the experience to face up to the problems of running a government and come out on the side of the students. One candidate came out for the concerns of students such as the Women's Awareness Center. His name is Martin Lewis and I endorse him for ASLCC President.

Patricia Jentile Office Administration major

I support Serena Brooks

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express support for Serena Brooks in her candidacy for president of the ASLCC.

Serena has continued to be a positive and creative force within the student senate during the last year. She has an in depth awareness of the inner functionings within all aspects of LCC. This experience will be greatly beneficial for you, the student body.

Serena has excellent communication skills, which, when working with a group of people, are essential. Serena's efforts will be effective in implementing many activities that will directly involve LCC students. Dedicated, responsible and patient are words that truly describe Serena's personal character.

Please vote for Serena Brooks for president on May 6 and 7.

Martin Lewis is capable

To the Editor:

The enrollment at LCC is declining and the administration is proposing elimination of ASLCC subsidies. Under these circumstances, we need a president who is capable of scrutinizing every iota of student government and squeezing out the maximum benefit to students out of declining resources. Martin Lewis has served an LCC internship under Rep. Mary Burrows of the State Legislature, and I know how committed he is to

Organic gardening

by Sharen Hulegaard TORCH Staff Writer

"People have been organic farmers since time began -- is there really any other way?" asked Lynn Coody, president of the local chapter of Tilth, a Northwest organization promoting organic agriculture.

Coody spoke in a seminar entitled "Organic Farming, Can It Work?," on Tuesday, April 23 as part of the Earth Week Activities.

"In organic farming, the main focus behind the methods that we use is to work with nature. We study nature and try to mimic the cycles and systems . . . that work on the earth," stated Coody.

Coody voiced the belief that "everything we buy is a vote for what we want to happen in our society - we vote with our dollars." Organic farmer's and their clients can "vote" by dealing with businesses that support organic farming and by buying only organically grown produce.

Coody contrasted organic and chemical farmers. "Chemical (using) growers are supporting a whole different section of society than organic growers. A chemical farmer has to support a system that is exploitive of people, of health, and of wages."

"Chemicals are taken up systematically by plants...they can't be washed or scrubbed off...they are inside the tree the apple grows on, and they're inside every cell of that apple that you eat," cautioned Coody. "Next time you're at a produce counter think of

After Coody's talk, John Graham, local member of Tilth presented a slide show he has developed entitled "Urban Rural Partnership," which lists the organizations in Lane County promoting organic agriculture, from financing to marketing.

"Organic farmers strive for self-reliance," explained Coody. They work to achieve a small system that tends to be labor intensive -- employing actual human labor in jobs such as hoeing, mulching, running tillers, etc. And they utilize smaller hand tools rather than "huge monolith equipment," according to

Energetic council plans for future

by Linda McDonald TORCH Staff Writer

"The Council has to determine how much electricity the region is going to need over the next 20 years and develop a plan to meet that need," says Ruth Curtis, representative for the Northwest Power Planning

Curtis, along with Doug Couch from Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) and Don Helgensen from Eugene Water and Electric Board (EWEB) spoke to a group of about 20 students and faculty Thursday, April 25, in an information session as part of the Earth Week activities.

Curtis described the make up of the council (which serves Idaho, Oregon, Washington, and western Montana) as a group of eight persons appointed by the governors of those states for their ability to make decisions and plan for the energy future. She said the council holds open meetings every three weeks at different locations in the region.

First organized in 1983, Curtis said the council has three main goals:

• Determining how much electricity will be needed over the next 20 years and when that power will be needed,

· developing a plan to protect fish and wildlife in the energy program, and

• involving the public in power planning on the local, state, and federal levels.

In meeting with these goals, the Council is the interacting link between Bonneville Power Administration, the utility companies, and the public, states Curtis.

Curtis, Couch (BPA), and Helgensen (EWEB) all agreed that conservation is the most prominent and least expensive power resource available to-

In 1977, EWEB instated a conservation program (called The Super Good Sense Program) to advise residents on weatherization and conservation processes. Helgensen says the program, which started with five employees and now has 50 employees, has succeeded in weatherizing 14 percent of the housing in Eugene. He says there are currently six thousand people on a waiting list for home audits, and that the program hopes to have weatherized one-third of the Eugene homes within the next five years.

The Super Good Sense Program is a plan that offers incentive to home builders to use more conservation techniques in the construction of new homes. And commercial property owners are just starting to become interested in the weatherization program, says Helgensen.

Helgensen pointed out that EWEB's utility rates are among the ten lowest in the nation and that EWEB customers currently pay two cents per kilowatt hour. That's a 200 percent increase over the 1974 rates of one cent per kilowatt hour but wholesale power costs should be stabilizing and hold off retail rate increases in the near future, according to Helgensen.

Doug Couch, speaking for BPA, said the process of making changes in power administration is a tricky one when working with a twentyyear forecast. He emphasized that costs of new projects must always be weighed with the projected income of future power use and that, as in any business, financing changes are always a gamble.

Since the Northwest is currently experiencing a power surplus, Couch was asked about the possibility of BPA selling power to the Midwest area. Couch said that the idea is being considered. However, it would necessitate purchasing a major power transmission line, and the cost of that purchase might outweigh the profits of selling to the Midwest.

Also, says Couch, when considering a new market, "We have to be certain that we will be able to service that market above and beyond our regional needs." He said that BPA already sells occasional power to Northern California, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming.

UNEN students oppose Reagan's support

Presidential,
Vice-Presidential

Serena Brooks Deanna Bowden

Having been in student government this last year, I have had the opportunity of learning the procedures, and the personal involvement it takes to produce results in an organization such as this.

This year, student government has made a number of accomplishments on all levels affecting students from personal assistance, to club and department support, campus programs and national awareness activities.

On the personal level, programs such as tax assistance, library typewriters, grievance system awareness, a wheel chair for the health department, and Wednesday's tea and coffee were channeled through the ASLCC.

On the club level, the Japanese Cultural Club, the LCC Association of Radio Broadcasters, Denali, Titan Pep Club, International Club of LCC, and the Lane Dance Theatre were all ratified as clubs. Student government supported the Art Department lecture series, sponsored a dance after the women's and men's basketball games, supported Denali, and became the largest contributor to the mural fund.

On an even wider scale, the senate joined the Community College Ski Ball in order to provide a low cost skiing trip for students, organized Peace Week, Family Awareness Week, and Earth Week.

Other business included forming the Student Advisory Committee consisting of a representative from each department to represent that department's needs, installing the topical suggestion box, acknowledging exemplary classified personnel, increasing faculty involvement, and establishing better communication with the administration.

Extending beyond the campus environment, the ASLCC instigated the voter awareness program, campaigned against Proposition 2, participated in the Students Organized Against Reductions campaign to fight financial aid reductions (1,426 cards were signed!), and worked extensively with groups such as the United States Students Association, CCOSAC, and the Political Involvement Committee, all concerning issues of great importance to community col-

It's unfortunate for all that students aren't aware of all that ASLCC does for them. Because national and international issues are more easily seen and noticed, the many campus issues that the senate addresses quietly slip by. Our biggest concern is in directing our energies to immediate student concerns and creating quality campus-wide awareness for students and staff. Not only do we plan to increase communication between student government and students on the main campus, but also between the Cottage Grove and downtown centers as well. Utilization of the Student Resource Center as a means of visible communication is in planning and better organization and timely upkeep of the topical suggestion box is in order. We also would like to finally attain teacher evaluations and to continue efforts on the childcare co-op. We feel there is a need for more diverse departmental support, including the Athletic Department. We would also like to implement career awareness programs.

Again, the main thrust of our platform is aimed at direct student needs. We will be working hard to respond to the concerns of the students. But we also feel that national and international awareness will not be wasted in our roles as student body president and vice-president. Occasionally, international issues affect us directly. Consider our country's administration and how it affects student aid. Notice how national policies affect local politics.

Anyone in any government should be politically aware, but student concerns should always have top priority in student government.

We are highly creative candidates who already know the ins and outs of student government and the task at hand. We've got the personal drive and experience needed to represent and serve you, the students of Lane Community College. A truly progressive ticket is one that knows its goals and already has the experience and know-how to see them realized. If you want to see the campaign issues become reality, then the Brooks/Bowden ticket is your best choice. We'll see you at the polls May 6 and 7.

Martin Lewis Joe Stipek

We want to congratulate Cindy Weeldreyer and Meredith Myers for their excellent work on the many tough issues facing ASLCC this past year.

Martin Lewis and Joe Stipek, candidates for ASLCC President and Vice President, will work toward supporting the many programs started by this year's administration.

We fully support the LTD Bus Pass Subsidy Program which has proved very helpful to LCC students. Also, approaching the high schools in Lane County in order to increase enrollment was an excellent idea and will be improved upon by our administration.

Martin Lewis -- presently an intern with Mary Burrows, a state representative -- has worked with the legislators on many issues concerning students and helped to set up Betsy Shand as an effective student lobbyist. He was also instrumental in increasing the number of candidates that were involved in candidate forums.

Joe Stipek was formerly a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Small Business Association, and the International Glass Dealer's Association. Joe's wide range of business experience has helped him to be a more effective and caring individual.

Programs operating effectively and serving students well should not be curtailed as a result of budget cuts. The Women's Awareness Center is a program that is serving well the students of LCC. We will support the Women's Awareness Center through the budget process. We want to encourage cultural events representing the diversity of students of all nationalities at LCC by supporting their various clubs. We will create a stage in the cafeteria to house all ASLCC events and will operate as a free speech center. We will create a strong student lobby against the financial aid

Martin Lewis and Joe Stipek, candidates for President and Vice President, feel that ASLCC should focus on campus issues that affect students and not on international issues. However, we believe that ASLCC should encourage and promote clubs which deal with international concerns from all perspectives.

We will encourage dialogue and debate from the different clubs. ASLCC will remain neutral.

We believe that the Women's Awareness Center, the Cultural Center Stage, the Free Speech Center, and student evaluations of instructors will serve the students better than our focusing on international issues.

WRITE-IN: Presidential, Vice-Presidential

Denise Abrams

I would like to first introduce myself to those of you who may not know me. My name is Denise Abrams and I'm running for ASLCC President. My running mate is the ever-comparable Jim Munyer. What Jim and I propose to do with and for LCC is only but productive. As a team, along with a strong cabinet of other directors and senators, we will bring to this campus more student involved activities. Also, specialized speakers and events of as many programs at LCC. We are hoping to appeal to your interests.

We are aware of LCC's two biggest problems that get it where it hurts: Budget and communication between the administration, students, and the community. We are going to try and involve one with the other.

Please see this as in your favor, because it is. Vote for me, Denise Abrams, and Jim Munyer.

Two ballot measures slated for election day

Monday May 6 and Tuesday May 7 is ASLCC Election Day on campus.

Elections will take place in the cafeteria from 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Students must present their student ID card to

Besides candidate elections there will be two measures on the ballot.

Ballot Measure 1

"Why pay more?" asks the pink ASLCC flyer referring to Ballot Measure 1.

A majority of yes votes for Ballot Measure 1 would increase the student body fee from $3 to $5 per term for main campus, credit enrollees.

A $6,246 cut in General Funds to the ASLCC from the college, increased costs and reduced enrollment make this increase necessary, according to the ASLCC flyer.

Passage of the measure would make the ASLCC financially self-sufficient, as it would also reliquish additional General Fund monies amounting to $3,263, as a result of the passage. This according to a memorandum sent to Jack Carter from the ASLCC. Carter announced at a recent Board of Education meeting that this final General Fund sum is listed as a proposed cut, also.

According to ASLCC Senator Ellen Radcliffe the following areas will suffer cuts if Measure 1 doesn't pass:

• Fifty percent across the board cuts in the ASLCC secretary's salary, the Student Resource Center budget, the election budget, club promotions, and the cultural budget (already cut 50 percent from 1983 according to Radcliffe.)

• One hundred percent cuts are expected in the LTD bus pass subsidy program, free telephone service and campus support services (these include ASLCC contributions to programs such as Denali, KLCC, Student Health Services, The Torch's color cover, etc.).

"And we'd still have to cut $4,000," says Radcliffe.

In 1984-85, the ASLCC administered a $77,107 budget. If Measure 1 passes, the proposed budget for 1985-86 will be $89,925 according to ASLCC estimates. If the measure is defeated Radcliffe estimates the budget will be reduced to $52,755.

This year's ASLCC budget included the following expenditures:

- $20,073 for legal services (provides an attorney on campus 20 hours per week as well as miscellaneous operating expenses),
- $12,130 to administer the photo ID program,
- $9,000 in expenses relating to the Cultural Program and
- $37,790 for student services which include $4,000 for the president's salary, $9,684 for the secretary's salary, $3,870 for fixed payroll charges, $1,600 for operating supplies, $500 for the SRC (used this year to buy coffee), $2,000 for travel, $450 for CCOSAC (state community college association) fees and dues, $800 for telephones, $1,000 for elections (pays for publicity, voter's guide and staff for polling and counting votes), $800 for club promotions, $4,800 to subsidize LTD bus passes, $2,000 for capital outlay (student lounge and typewriter library maintenance), $1,200 for Earth Week and $4,766 for contingencies.

Ballot Measure 2

This measure would ammend the ASLCC constitution and require each year's senate to establish a student advisory committee to increase and direct communication between the student senate, LCC departments and student clubs. This year the senate operates an advisory committee and according to President Cindy Weeldreyer senate members hold at-large positions and department representation is sporadic.

l. I find it difficult to evaluate how the 1984-85 ASLCC administration has performed its duties this past year due to the lack of communication with the student body. I believe that an administration's merits directly relate to the integrated involvement of the student body, student government, and the local community.

Goals for this coming year

A. Creating this integration

B. Increasing revenue through fundraising utilizing various departments, and the resources in our own student body.

C. Widening the scope of our support services and facilitating access to these services through advertising and promotion.

2. I personally feel that since financially ASLCC is running at a severe disadvantage, that my efforts will be focused first on our student body and local community, but never losing sight of our humanitarian responsibility to our brothers and sisters of our planet.

Kevin "E.Z." Olmstead

1. This year's student government has done a fine job in taking care of their duties and responsibilities. What I have not seen is the direct communication between the students and their government. I would like to have seen more activities that directly involved a greater number of students. Our school is more than a place for academic learning, it is a place for people to broaden their understanding of our world and the people who inhabit it.

2. Our ASLCC main objective is to focus on issues that directly relate to the students who attend school here. Our school has a vast number of students of different nationalities. So issues of interest to our students can come from the campus, national, and international areas.

WRITE-IN: Senatorial

l. This year's student government showed a real concern about human affairs. They made a lasting commitment to a wide and diverse audience. Earth Week drew in a lot of solidarity. Unfortunately, many people missed a great day Friday because they didn't know! As a caring candidate I'd like to focus more attention to student activities. Art is significantly lacking in the bulletin boards. Let's turn-up some low-budget decor.

I'd like to fill a senatorial position and help ratify or write in other sincere students. ASLCC '85 faces a challenging year. I support the student fee increase. Keeping the phones and bus subsidy is a must. Compared with $50 at the University, we get a lot of benefit from our allocation. Encourage yourselves to vote this term.

2. As a pregnant veteran you can't forget, I'll be back here next year finishing my A.A. I'd like to thank a lot of people I didn't meet for ASLCC '84, and graduates, and new friends. There is a cooperative future ahead no matter what and student government is going to bring it all together and present a growing representation of LCC.

Let's keep the campus issues at hand. We need better networking. The Women's Center and Campus Support Services help everybody. I think cultural highlighting will remain a strong point at LCC. Yes, more Earth Week, more participation and exchange.

Greed cause of world hunger

by Karen Irmsher
TORCH Staff Writer

"Hunger," claims Frances Moore Lappe, "is caused not by a scarcity of food, but by a scarcity of democracy."

Lappe, an authority on world hunger, packed the EMU Ballroom April 22 as the keynote speaker for the U of O's Earth Week celebration.

She was catapulted into the world hunger limelight in 1971 with the publication of her best-selling book "Diet for a Small Planet."

"Overnight I became the Julia Childs of the soybean circuit," she jokes.

Although Lappe's book is packed with vegetarian recipes, cooking had never been her main concern. The big questions for her have centered on the incongruity of people suffering and dying from hunger in a world where there is enough for everybody.

She suggests that while people who regularly get enough to eat think in terms of an empty feeling, hunger in the Third World should be seen as a collection of emotions -- the grief of watching loved ones die, the anguish of impossible choices, humiliation and powerlessness.

The problem is not scarcity of food, she says, but that all over the world "fewer and fewer decision-makers are controlling more and more of the land."

A big landowner in Mexico told her he could make 20 times more growing tomatoes for export to the US than from growing food to feed the Mexican people. Coffee, chocolate, bananas, sugar, exotic fruits -- the developed world will pay highly for them.

Each acre that's turned to export production is one less to feed the country's inhabitants, who can't pay the price anyway. Since 1960 the export production from Central America has grown fourfold.

Humanitarian aid to poor countries just doesn't work, she claims. "The fundamental fallacy of government to government aid is that you can not go through the powerful to reach the powerless."

Of US food aid she says, "It's no longer related to the question of need. Food is now used to reward our strategic allies."

In order to truly help poor countries, she says, our country needs to stop supporting repressive governments -- "to get out of the way of change." Governments that are not responsive to the needs of the people, need to be changed, she believes "People do not go on watching their children die. First they try peaceful demands. Then they become violent," states Lappe.

"Americans are afraid a shift in power will be against their interests" but nevertheless we must remove our support from these repressive governments, she insists, and "give change a chance."

Two LCC media 'Heroes' track down equipment

This is the first in a series of articles about LCC's "Unsung Heroes." Articles are written by students in LCC's Newswriting II class.

by Lisa Zimmerman

September, 1984

The Problem: A missing projector. Bringing to bear their years of experience, the two men skillfully decide on the most likely location of the missing piece of equipment, and the most effective way to retrieve it.

They're not police, detectives, or the FBI. Dave Rosen and Phil Powers are LCC media technicians, and retrieving misplaced audio-visual equipment is one of the various services they perform for LCC staff and students.

Their base of operation is the southwest corner of the library. From here, surrounded by television sets, movie projectors, video units, and tape recorders, they coor-dinate the scheduling and distribution of approximately 800 pieces of Audio-Visual equipment.

In fact, according to Powers, "No two days have ever been the same." The two are also responsible for upkeep, set-ups, and minor maintainence of audio-visual equipment.

In addition, they are cinematic coordinators for the Language Arts and Social Science departments, as well as consultants for any special presentation at LCC, such as graduations and conferences.

Powers has programmed computers for many of the departments on campus, and is often called when departments need computer assistance. Both with the Channel 20 telecourses when the necessity arises. In fact, they deal with "everyone from President Schafer on down."

But distribution can be tricky at times. Demand for equipment often exceeds the inventory, thus keeping track of gear is one of the hardest parts of the job.

For example, the library has only 2 half-inch video units to serve the entire campus and operate the approximately 500 half-inch VHS video cassettes. "That's the toughest thing for me, not being able to meet everyone's needs all the time," says Rosen. But, adds Powers, we "get by."

There was the time when a lamp on a film projector burned out in the middle of a special presentation for President Schafer and some promiand came up empty handed. Collegues gave the projector up for lost; they presumed it had been stolen.

Nonetheless, Powers and Rosen kept their eyes open during the next two months,

What of the missing projector? Powers and Rosen first searched the Math and Arts Building where they had originally delivered the equipment. No luck.

'Birds of a Feather' to perform at the Hult

This year's Oregon Imagination Celebration takes place on Saturday, May 4 in downtown Eugene.

The celebration is an outreach festival of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and locally sponsored by the Lane Regional Arts Council, Eugene Parks and Recreation, Lane Educational Service District and the 4-J School District.

Translation is baroquely Americanized

'Doctor' presents humor and history

Review by Ann Van Camp
TORCH Staff Writer

Brown jugs? Gol-darns? Seriosities?

Maybe something was lost in the translation. But without Morris Bishop's American translation of "The Doctor In Spite Of Himself," Lane Community College audiences would need to understand Moliere's 17th-century French to enjoy Le Medecin Malgre Lui.

Last Friday, LCC's Theatre opened its final play of the season with a marvelous interpretation and the audience seemed, indeed, to understand Moliere's farcical humor -baroquely Americanized as it was.

And Director Stan Elberson gives the audience more than just good humor.

"The Doctor" exposes audiences to a bit of theatrical history; productions were commonly acted out from pageant wagons as they toured over the European countryside in the 1600's. The horse-drawn wagon pulled onto the LCC stage in the opening scene is a detailed replica of just such a wagon. Engineered by Skip Hubbard, it is the center from which the players act.

The wagon's fold-down walls become the stage and the brightly colored trappings create a light-hearted circus effect. As Elberson's actors bounce in and out of the wagon, they puff life and energy back into Moliere's three hundred year old characters, making it easy enough to laugh at ourselves today through the slap-stick portrayal of revenge, jealousy, greed, and gullibility.

The story relates the episodes of a drunken wood-cutter, Sganarelle, who is beaten (literally) into the profession of doctoring. It's all a trick played on him by his revenge-seeking wife as she tries to get even with him for beating her.

While the tricked husband knows nothing of being a physician, he does know something about the nature of people. And he cleverly turns the product of his wife's revenge into a profitable career for himself. That is, until he's discovered.

David Stuart Bull as Sganarelle, (a role Moliere frequently played himself), is in full control as he romps through an hour and a half of non-stop fun. His powerful voice booms into the theater and he seems to genuinely enjoy the character he has become. Even his trickiest monologues are fairly easy to catch, which considering the satirical subtleties and farcical phrases - is commendable.

Sandra Williams makes marvelous use of facial expressiveness and exaggerated movements to flesh out Martine, the wife. Her shrill voice is ideally irritative and immitative of the stereotypical termagant. She pouts her way through predictable conflict in the spousal relationship and then craftily prattles her plot of revenge to two unsupecting servants in search of a physician.

Jon Wilson is whimsical and laughable as the servant Lucas, accenting his performance with the antical movements of a Stan Laurel and the twangy delivery of a Gomer Pyle. He's the comical highlight of the evening, supporting most of his lines with contorted facial expressions and definitely making gullibility believable.

Dwan Shepard, as the servant Valere, is almost an Oliver Hardy shadow in his dialog with Wilson, and his timing and articulation are well controlled.

Lucas and Valere literally spank Sganarelle into believing he is a doctor, and whisk him away to their wealthy master, Geronte. Geronte's daughter has lost her speech. Actually she's only pretending so she can marry the man of her choice, not her father's.

Patrick Michalek is very convincing as the stubborn yet naive Geronte. Unfortunately,

KLCC reaps $40,000 early

KLCC 89FM successfully concluded its Spring Radiothon Sunday, April 28. The marathon fundraiser lasted eight and a half days and reaped $40,000 -- the goal of the radiothon.

National Public Radio (NPR) conducted a national fundraiser from April 22-29 and according to KLCC Development Director Paula Chan Gallagher, "It was helpful to have NPR pitching for us."

A total of $40,010 was pledged by 1235 persons and businesses. Of this sum, 133 individuals and businesses pledged $4,035 in response to the 'Thon Buster renewal campaign. These early pledges came in before the radiothon and contributed to the early conclusion of the most ambitious radiothon ever conducted by KLCC. The average pledge was $29.25.

During three segments of Prairie Home Companion $5,375 worth of pledges were phoned in. "That's pretty outrageous," states Gallagher.

KLCC received close to one hundred premium donations for the radiothon "including Honey" Heaven," says Gallagher. Honey Heaven donated a jar of honey to the next 30 callers at one point during the fundraiser.

Native Americans to be relocated

There are over 10,000 Navajo people around Big Mountain in Arizona, who are trying to live in accordance with the ancient teachings of their ancestors. By raising sheep and growing what they need, they are one of the largest self-sufficient communities in North America.

Now, the U.S. government and the energy companies are attempting to force them from their sacred homeland to make way for coal, uranium, and other mining and development interests. The plan (P.L. 93-531) will cost U.S. taxpayers over $500 million, and sets July 1986 as the scheduled completion of "relocation."

So connected are their culture and religion to the land that relocation is literally life-threatening to the Navajo people. The very few who have already moved have suffered tremendous increases in physical and psychological illness, and many have lost the benefits they were promised as an inducement to move. The majority have refused to leave and say they never will.

The government is stepping up pressure to complete the relocation program in the face of mounting evidence that successful relocation is impossible. Presently, the Big Mountain (Joint Use Area) Legal Defense/Offense Committee(BMLDOC) is engaged in state and federal litigation designed to further expose the fraud, corruption and failure of the relocation program. As a direct result of these efforts, both congress and the F.B.I. are currently investigating the program, and congressional oversight hearings have been scheduled.

Dr. Loveys defends Athletic cuts

by Ron Gullberg TORCH Sports Editor

Responding to an April 26 Torch story regarding the Athletic Department budget cuts, Dr. Frederick Loveys, Head of Health, Physical Education and Athletics, defended his reasons for initiating the cutting of soccer and the Intramural Director position.

Soccer

- "The athletic program has exceeded its budget over the last two to three years, and even without the institution's (LCC) cutting going on, I would have still re-inserted an athletic program to live within our means," said Dr. Loveys.
- The decision to cut soccer was based on a balanced program. The elimination of soccer will even LCC's Athletic Department to four men's and women's sports each.
- Soccer Coach Dave Poggi is the only part-time instructor.
- The soccer team's travel expenses are too high. "I didn't compile merits of the soccer program against the baseball program in terms of win-loss records," said Loyeys. "I took into consideration the FTE costs (time on the road, therefore less study time)."

Spectre of Tulane Univ.?

Last week, Poggi said LCC's soccer team would raise its own money if allowed to stay in the NWAACC. But Loveys vetoed the proposal, saying, "it raises the spectre of Tulane (University). The private individual would have financial control over the program.

"It puts the coach in the business of fundraising and out of coaching . . . coaches should be academics and sports leaders, not hustlers," said Dr. Loveys.

NWAACC move justified

Dr. Loveys feels the Athletic Department's decision to jump to the NWAACC two years ago was a sound one. "I think the decision reflected a weakness in in-state competition and the only sport that personally suffered was men's basketball and what they were able to do prior to the joining of the NWAACC (making its own schedule and building an impressive w-l record)."

LCC's wins have put a financial burden on the department, not the scheduling, according to Dr. Loveys. "Because of the successes of the teams and the citing of the regional championships in Washington, this has put a tremendous burden on our expenses."

Intramurals Director

Dr. Loveys' proposal to compensate for the demise of the Intramural Director will include: Appointing two part-time advisors to oversee the extramural and intramural aspects of the department, who will report to Athletic Director Sue Thompson.

"I think the overall reorganizational plan adds a lot of merit," said Thompson. "We haven't even scratched the surface yet -- we need to utilize our facilities -- more special events (high school championships, student needs, etc.) -- we have excellent facilities."

Both Dr. Loveys and Thompson agree that the department has outgrown itself and needs changes. "Mitch (Allara, the Intramurals Director) has been reporting to me, because I wanted to review the actions he's responsible for," said Dr. Loveys. "In many respects, these activities have not changed in four to five years . . . we need to have club sports beyond men's volleyball, and have recreational activities that attract more than a half-dozen people in the evenings."

Spikers romp in 4-way meet

LCC women's discus standout, Chris Mitchell, hurls the plate at Saturday's four-way meet.

by John Egan TORCH Sports Writer

For LCC men's track members Mark Cumer and Roy Session this has been a season of few disapointments, and Saturday was no exception.

Cumer won three of the throwing events, and Session placed first in both the 100m and 200m, participated in both relays, and added a second place finish in the long jump. LCC's men's track team cruised to an easy victory in the LCC 4-Way Meet.

Ron Breuninger provided Session with some friendly competition as both sprinters tied for first in the 100 meters, and Session edged his teammate by a tenth of a second to win the 200m. Breuninger also ran the first leg of Lane's winning 4x400m relay team.

Cumer, however, didn't receive too much competition from anyone. Cumer won the hammer, shot put, and discus, keeping up his season long consistency. His most convincing victory came in the discus where he out threw his nearest competitor by over 19 feet.

LCC also got first place finishes from Brace McGillivary in the steeplechase, David Hunnicut in a close 400m event, Pat Lanning in the 400 intermediate hurdles, and Kevin Bloom in the high jump.

LCC finished with a final team score of 93 points, well ahead of Linn-Benton 44: Chemeketa 38; and Clackamas

If resilience has a name, it must be Chris Mitchell.

Forced to throw from a standing position -- due to a knee injury -- the LCC shot putter came through with a league best of 38'4", and, with double-winners Angie Ross and Marion Zerull, prompted the LCC women's track team to an easy victory in the LCC 4-Way Meet on Saturday.

Track & Field

Ross won the 400m and 200m and anchored LCC's victory in the 400m relay, while Zerull won the 100m hurdles, and went 17'3" for an easy victory in the long jump. In addition to the shot put, Mitchell also threw a personal best of 123'3" to place second in the discus.

By the end of the meet LCC had racked up a total of 86 points, easily out distancing second place finisher Linn Benton. And, along the way, established eight new personal bests, while qualifying four more athletes for the NWAACC Championships.

In the 100m, Dierdre Thomas pulled off a season's best of 12.5 to tie for first, and former LCC hoopster Dawn Smoot finished third. Smoot proved her versatility by also placing second in both the javelin and shot put, as well as running the second leg of the 400m relay. In that event Lane improved its season best to 49.7 with an easy victory. But according to Head Coach Lyndell Wilken, "has a lot of room for improvement."

Double-header losses drop LCC into second place

by Darren Foss
TORCH Sports Writer

LCC's baseball team fell into inconsistent play last week, losing four of six games, but still remains only one game behind league leading Mt. Hood.

The losses dropped the Titans' league record to 9-7, but still is good enough for second place in the NWAACC standings. Overall LCC is 17-12.

Saints.... 5, 7 Titans 1, 0

Mt. Hood's Saints dropped the Titans to second place due to a double-header sweep of LCC Thursday April 25 at home (in a makeup of last Tuesday's rain-out).

The Saints relied on strong pitching, limiting the Titans' offense to only one run and six hits during the twinbill. This was Lane's lowest offensive output of the season and snapped its four-game league win streak.

Mt. Hood came up with two runs in the second inning to grab a 2-1 advantage and never looked back in the 5-1 win.

The Titan's offense was shut down by Saints pitcher Dave Veres, who allowed only two hits. Gary Fonnesbeck went the distance for LCC.

In game two, the Saints jumped in front early, scoring a run in the first inning that proved to be the game winner. Mt. Hood went on to shut out the Titans 7-0. It was the first

LCC bounced back Saturday, April 27, and started a new two-game win streak, by sweeping a double-header from the Umpqua Timbermen at home.

Umpqua came back with a run in the sixth to knot the game at 7-7. Neither team was able to score in the seventh, forcing extra innings.

LCC capitalized in the eighth on a Dan Vidos single with one out that drove in speedy Ken Fox from second base for the game winner.

In game two, LCC built an early 3-0 lead after two innings. Umpqua finally got on the board in the fifth, cutting the game to 3-1. The Titans added two more runs to put the game away 5-1, before Umpqua scored two more.

Dan Luneski played a strong double-header, knocking in two runs and slugging four hits in two games. Ted Davis, not a regular pitcher, went the complete game, giving up only three hits.

Titans 4,4 Cougars . . 8, 5

Tuesday, April 30, LCC traveled to Clackamas to take on the Cougars in a league double-header and was surprisingly swept by a upsetminded Cougar squad. Clackamas won both games, 8-4 and 5-4.

Clackamas came out hungry in the first game, jumping to an early 5-0 lead in the second inning -- capitalizing on LCC errors.

In game two, LCC exploded for four runs in the third inning, keyed by Jack Glueck's two-run homer. The Cougars rallied with four runs in the bottom of the fourth, tying the game at 4-4, where the score stood until the bottom of the seventh.

Record holder, coach, aviator: Session aims high

LCC men's track sprinter Roy Session, an avaiation major, may be cheating. Somehow he's found a way to smuggle jet packs in races, or he could be just plain fast.

Unfortunately, for Session's opponents, the latter is the truth.

Session prepped at Clark High School in Las Vegas, Nev., and holds state records in the 400m (47.5); 400m relay; 800m relay; and 1600m relay, and is yet to see an opponent ahead of him this season.

So how did a speedster from 'The City That Never Sleeps' land in 'Track City U.S.A.'? 'Basically for Lane's Aviation Maintenance program,' said Session.

But what about the thought of running in Eugene, Roy? "It helps. There are more people at the meets . . . people really get behind you here."

Obviously the climates between the two cities are very different. "I had to get adjusted to the rain . . I'm used to running in 110-degree weather, that's why my times have been a little slower, but now that I'm used to it, it's (his times) starting to pick up."

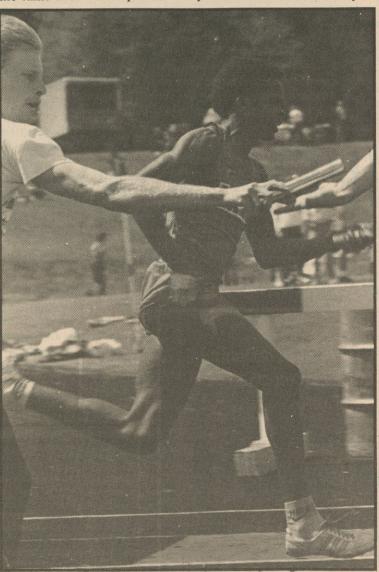

In his spare time, Session is Head Sprinters Coach for Track City Track Club, where he teaches his craft to 7-14 year-olds.

"It's fun . . . the 10-11 year-olds retain more coaching and basics, and the little kids are a little hard, but I really enjoy it . . . little kids are so enthusiastic," said Session.

Being a coach and runner at the same time has helped Session's outlook on his own abilities. "It helps me see what I do wrong by looking at the way the kids run, and their form."

After next fall term, Session plans to enter the University of

In the mean time, Session's goal is to lower his times, something that's changed with this season. "Now, it's (his goal) seeing my times drop. Not as much as winning. If I get my time down to 45 (seconds in the 400m) I should get sponsored by a big track club," said Session.

Aiding Session in his quest is LCC Men's Track Coach Harland Yiarte. "He's (Yiarte) the best coach I've ever had, he's helped me a lot," said Session.

Session is undecided whether he'll just stick with airplane mechanics or try for his pilot's license. But one thing is for sure, he's been giving his opponents a lesson in aerodynamics.

Stating she "was treated unjustly, in a cruel, intimidating manner in my conference with Mrs. Blue," and on several occasions in class, she contrasted this treatment with that of another student, whose father is chair of the Oregon State Board of Dental Examiners. The other student received a test score one point higher and reported having a favorable, positive conference with Blue, said Ramaglia.

White said sometimes the faculty's attempts to advise students are not always construed as helpful, and noted that strong coping skills are needed in a vigorous program such as Dental Hygiene.

In addition, Ramaglia objected to a change in course requirements, (added to the course syllabus by Blue on Feb. 24, 1982), which increased the number of student patients to be treated in the course of the term.

Blue said the change was left off the syllabus, but the memo was sent two weeks before the end of the term. "Every student received it (the memo) and was subject to the clarification," and had ample time to complete the work.

Ramaglia also described class records as unrepresentative of her academic progress in the program. She did, however, admit experiencing some difficulty with time management and record keeping -- factors which form the basis for part of the grade in the dental clinic.

Blue noted the record keeping expectations are clearly defined before the students begin their coursework. She added that students have access to these -- and all other records of their course work -and their progress is appraised throughout the term.

Immediately following the hearing, the committee met in executive (non-public) session to make a recommendation to President Schafer, this recommendation is now before the president.

To the Editor,

In the past year, working with Denali, I have shared office space with the ASLCC. Although our organizations are separate, I have seen the day to day work of the LCC student government. In watching the individuals involved in a detached, yet intimate manner, I am convinced that Serena Brooks was the most dedicated, hardest working member of the ASLCC this year. I personally can think of no better candidate for student body president next year and I am proud to endorse her candidacy.

Real revolutions are quiet ones

To the Editor,

My goal as this year's Earth Week Coordinator was to inspire. My sincerest hope is that I was not the only individual for who this hope was realized.

The Eugene City Council and the Lane County Commissioners have declared this Earth Week and have recommended all citizens and employees strive to protect the air, water and land we enjoy. The University of Oregon Survival Center and Lane Community College were mentioned and commended for our efforts in this work.

At a past Earth Week, two time Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling told standing room only crowds "that now was the time to take unprecedented actions to save the world." During this year's Earth Week similar messages were sent. Francis Moore Lappe urges the reclaiming and redefining of the value of democracy in terms of real practical choices in daily life away from politics and back into the economic arena. If our future is to be based on real human values we must begin within our own individualism to build a democracy which we have not been born into but we must

These changes are made daily. It isn't fun. It isn't terribly exciting. It means growing up, being responsible, taking power. The real revolutions of our time are the quiet ones. Examples for me are Lloyd Marbet working on Proposition 9 and food irradiation, Citizens Action for Lasting Security working on White Train, Oregon Natural Resource Council and Arable working on protecting nature and organic practices. These are some of the contacts which made this Earth Week worth missing a few classes, working the long hours and fun.

Mary Ridge ASLCC Senator former Earth Week Coordinator

the character of Geronte is luke warm, so we miss out on Michalek's powerful poten-

Dominique Sepser, Lucas' wife and Geronte's wellequipped wet nurse, brings with her a genuine French acccent. She enhances her clever schoolgirl coquetry with a good sense of timing as she trifles with Sganarelle and enfuriates the jealous Lucas.

Wendy Spahr as the daughter of Lucinde, and Gregory Cole as her lover Leandre, make a perfectly appropriate couple. Spahr has strong delivery and poised carriage -- when indeed she does regain her speech. And Cole's head of long, blond curls is almost as interesting to watch as the character he plays.

Also in the cast are Paul Benoit, Jim Freeman, Aaron Lewis, and Renee Jones. The dancers, under choreography direction of Anne Egan, include Joe Acosta, Chapin Arnold, Christie Clark, Ann Dolan, Sara Lombardi, and Eric Maxwell. Combining ballet steps and mime activity, the dancers introduce the three acts with their own little, satirical shadows of the story as it un-

The costuming certainly compliments the historical setting being presented. Nancy Julian mixes fabrics and laces and styles with an interesting balance considering the contrasts of characters who play opposite each other. Masks used by the dancers and Sganarelle are a classical touch designed and constructed by Greg Cole.

Audiences who know their Moliere, love Moliere. For people who are less familiar with farces and satire, the LCC production is still an enjoyable experience. And it serves as a reminder that theater didn't always have flashing light systems and synthesized musical accompaniment. It's also a laughable look now at how human nature hasn't really changed much in the past 300 years. And there's nothing lost in that translation.

Performances continue through Saturday, May 4. Tickets are $5 (two for $5 with student coupons). The LCC box office number is 726-2202.
