VP of Instruction selected, Interim chosen for position

by Mary Browning

Torch Associate Editor

Interim Vice President of Instruction Jim Ellison has been chosen to fill that position on a permanent basis, subject to the approval of the LCC Board of Education.

LCC President Jerry Moskus decided to offer the position to Ellison during the winter break. Moskus says he based his decision on recommendations made by the 10 member search committee.

Moskus doesn't anticipate any problems with the board's approval of Ellison's appointment. Moskus says that he tried to select a person who has the skills that will be required of LCC's Vice President of Instruction in the coming years.

He cited Ellison's strength in dealing with budgets and his ability to engender trust in people as two of his strong points.

"The demands are high, but I think that Ellison is more than up to the challenge."

President Jerry Moskus

"This is one of the most difficult jobs on campus," says Moskus. "The demands are high, but I think that he (Ellison) is more than up to the challenge."

The search committee outlined several professional characteristics that it wanted in a vice president. These included: commitment to a comprehensive community college, commitment to open instruction post.

Two orders of business are at the top of Ellison's agenda. "The first order of business," says Ellison, "is to more effectively use the resources of the Office of Instruction. The second is to come to grips with the effects of Ballot Measure 5 (passed in November and affecting the funding of public schools)."

Fired exec starts rival flight school

by Devan C. Wilson

Torch Editor

Avia Flight Services, the flight school started by former Flight Tech Chair Terry Hagberg, who was fired by the college August 10, and Chief Flight Instructor Ron Gustafson, has begun operations in Corvallis with the business of Kawada Industries.

Kawada, a Japanese firm which previously contracted with LCC's Flight Tech Department for the training of Japanese students as helicopter pilots, terminated its contract with the college on Dec. 1.

Kawada's General Manager, Tommy Naritomi, in a letter to LCC President Jerry Moskus, said the Japanese firm was withdrawing from the contract due to "recent events."

Naritomi told the Torch, Thursday, Nov. 15, that the primary factor in Kawada's decision was LCC's dismissal of Hagberg, who was fired following a four-month audit of the Flight Tech Department.

Hagberg, whose contract allotted for a six-month reassignment before his firing, and Gustafson resigned from their posts at LCC, clearing the way for operations at Avia to begin Dec. 1.

Their resignations were accepted by the LCC Board of Education Dec. 12. Hagberg has filed a grievance against the college over his firing, but with his resignation that grievance is now a moot point.

Hagberg said Thursday, Jan. 3, that currently 23 Kawada students are training with Avia, located at the Corvallis Airport.

When originally announced by the college that Kawada had withdrawn from the contract, Moskus said it was in violation of the terms of the contract, which required a three month notice of termination. At that time, however, Moskus recommended to the LCC Board of Education that the college not seek legal action against Kawada unless it could prove financial liability. The board agreed to comply with Moskus' request until further information was gathered.

On Thursday, Jan. 3, Moskus said it appears that there has in fact been financial loss by the college due to the termination of

Bush, others offered potential New Year's resolutions to adopt

O.K., the new year is upon us, and we all have made our new year's resolutions . . . or have we? Admittedly I have only done so in the vaguest of ways.

I have resolved to take time following this school year to focus on the direction I want to take with my life (also known as "goofing off for awhile before finally buckling down").

devan wilson

I have also resolved to keep my eye on those in the public eye and determine, for myself, if the actions they take are in the best interest of the constituencies they serve.

Now if I could, I would offer the following resolutions for following selected public officials or personalities adopt:

- Newly selected VP of Instruction Jim Ellison: to figure out what in the hell Ballot Measure 5 means to public education in general and community colleges in particular.
- Governor Barbara Roberts: to commit constant funding to public education despite the implications of Ballot Measure 5
- George Bush: to live up to his claim of being the "education president."
- Bush again and Joint Chief of Staff Chair Colin Powell: to do all that they can to bring American soldiers home from the Saudi sands as promptly as possible.
- Dan Quayle: to show Bush the best shot for getting out of that sand trap called Saudi Arabia.
- Saddam Hussein: to resign his post as Iraq's leader to team with Mr. Ed, thus forming the revamped Milli Vanilli.
- Milli Vanilli's Rob and Fab: resolve to lay low for awhile before resurfacing as car wash attendants in Northern Saskatchewan.
- Roseanne Barr: to take singing and charm lessons from both Rob and Fab.
- Frank Sinatra and Sinead O'Conner: to get together . . . talk it out, solve this Star Spangled Banner thing.
- Arsenio Hall: to shelve the "woof-woof" and wild arm shake, and come up with a new gimmick.
- Senator Jesse Helms: to acquire a new appreciation for art in any shape or form.
- Luther Campbell of 2 Live Crew: to acquire a new appreciation for music, in any other shape or form.
- Special Agent Dale Cooper: to get out of Twin Peaks. Leland (and Bob) killed Laura, your work is done.
- David Lynch: kill someone else off; nobody really wants to see Agent Cooper go.
- LCC Board of Education Member Chuck Ivey: to fess up and admit he really is Mr. Clean.
- LCC President Jerry Moskus: to speak out and dispel the rumors that he is Merlin Olsen.
- Portland Trailblazers: to bring the NBA championship back to the Northwest.

And so, I'm curious to know what resolutions these selected few have made, and how closely they correlate with my suggestions.

OPINION POLL

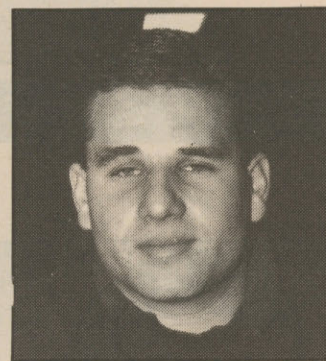

Question of the Week: Would you support an immediate U.S. invasion of Kuwait if Iraq hasn't begun to withdraw it's troops by the Jan. 15 ultimatum set by President Bush?

Julie Christensen:

Education

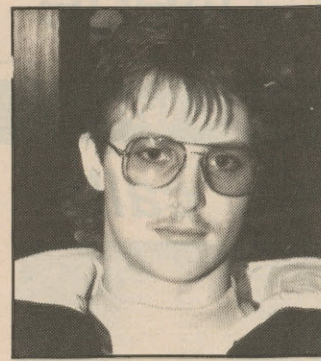

"No, I wouldn't be for it. I'm for peace."

Chad Waguespack

Business

"No I would not. I think the sanctions need to be given a chance to work."

Jarret Palodichuk:

Computer Science

"No, I wouldn't. I don't think we're ready for armed troops over there. The military advisors have advised us not to trudge forward, they're not ready."

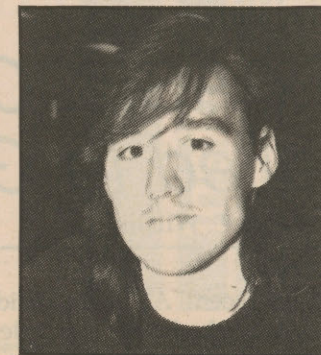

Ranell Tratham Teaching

"Yes I would. I think we need to stop him when we can and not have them take over and say that they can do what ever they want. I think we want to get them before they get into Israel and I think that's what they are trying to do."

Dena Bailey Medical Office Assistant Program

"Probably yes, because we've given (Saddam Hussein) lot's of time, and we've given him a deadline, and we've tried to make negotiations and it doesn't seem to be happening. I'm hoping it does before the deadline."

Ron Homer Graphic Design

"No I wouldn't. I am completely against it . . . I don't think the President knows what he's talking about, and that scares me because I think he's going in for a lot of the wrong reasons and he's going into it too fast."

Measure 5, he says, is one of his major concerns. At this time Ellison plans to go through with the normal budget process and develop a contingency plan when the effects of measure 5 are better understood.

"We just can't stop and see what will happen. We need to plan for our future now, and change that future if we have to," he says. "The hard part is not knowing. It's a very complex issue."

Ellison said that he appreciated the thoroughness of the search process, which included candidate visits to the LCC campus, visits to finalists workplaces, and interviews with all constituencies of the college.

He holds a bachelor's degree in education and a master's degree in science education from the University of Oregon.

He has worked at LCC since 1967. In that time he has worked as dean of weekend college, dean of instructional support, dean of liberal arts, associate dean of instructional services, and chair and assistant professor of study skills.

Ellison says that he feels being in touch with the community is important for a community college educator. Because of this he serves on the City of Eugene Planning Commission and the Joint Parks Committee.

The Vice President of Instruction post was vacated June 1 when Jacquelyn Belcher left to accept a position as President of Minneapolis Community College. Ellison was named interim vice president by Moskus after an inter-campus search.

Harris, an engineer with the U.S. Marine Corp Sixth Bridge Company, Sixth Engineer Support Battalion, reported to active duty on Dec. 8 to Camp Pendleton in California. Reached the preceding day by the Torch, Harris said he believed it likely that his company would be bound for San Antonio in a week. He did not know what his final destination would be, but he expected to go to Saudi Arabia to take part in Operation Desert Shield.

Sunday, Dec. 30, it was announced in the media by the Marine Reserves that Harris' division was being sent to Saudi Arabia in support of Operation Desert Shield.

Millet, who is part of Naval Cargo Handling Battalion—5, reported Dec. 10, said Friday, Dec. 7, that he was being sent to Williamsburg, Va. where he would join in the forming of a large battalion. The battalion, Millet said, is expected to be sent to Saudi Arabia sometime after Christmas.

Both Millet and Harris were students at the University of Oregon, Millet a senior studying pre-law, and Harris a junior political science major.

Short on time when reached, Millet offered no other comment on his situation.

Harris, however, was quite vocal about his situation as well as U.S. troop employment to Saudi Arabia.

"I'm not happy about going (to Saudi Arabia)," he said, "and I don't approve of the role the U.S. is playing in Saudi Arabia."

The U.S. policy in the Iraqi-Kuwaiti conflict, Harris said, is inconsistent with previous policy — that the U.S. government is calling the conflict a "human rights issue," but has in the past supported other Arab dictators, such as the Shah of Iran.

Harris said if soldiers and citizens die in Saudi Arabia it will not be for freedom and democracy, but for U.S. oil interests.

He said he sympathizes with the Kuwaiti people and he wishes for a complete withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

"I'm certainly not a pacifist," he said, but feels the situation should be left in the hands of the Arabs.

"I would encourage those students that are in disagreement with this (the Bush administration's) policy to speak out," he said, "not only for the sake of Americans but for the sake of Arabs."

Harris said if a U.S. invasion of Kuwait occurs, it would not be like the brief, effective U.S. invasions of Grenada and Panama. "It's going to be a messy situation, with consequences."

Snow or ice on the ground: tune into local radio

Winter storms have arrived in Oregon, bringing with them an abundance of snow in the mountains and the ever-constant threat of snow and freezing conditions on the valley floor.

And with the cold weather comes extremely hazardous road conditions, which can result in the closure of LCC's campus. In fact, the icy conditions have already resulted in the closure of the campus for three full days and one afternoon closure, all during Christmas break.

When conditions are hazardous, students and staff should tune their radios to KPNW-FM, KUGN-AM and FM, or KLCC-FM for information on the status of class cancellations at LCC, as well as other schools in the area.

But just because classes are in session does not mean it's always safe to drive to LCC. Head of Campus Services Paul Colvin says due to fluctuations in the weather patterns of the Willamette Valley, students and staff should "exercise good personal judgement" in deciding to attempt to drive.

Study in London: culture shock

by Mary Browning

Torch Associate Editor

Students traveling to London, England this spring term as part of LCC's London Study Program will be in for a shock if they aren't expecting to experience a foreign culture, says Speech Instructor Virginia DeChaine.

DeChaine taught theater and literature in London during spring term, 1990, as part of the London Study program.

She calls it a "wonderful program," but cautions students that "Everything is foreign to the way we live," despite the common language.

Although the application deadline has passed, the LCC Office of Instruction will accept applications submitted with full payment through the end of February.

The term costs about $3,500, but program administrators recommend an additional $1,000 to $1,500 for expenses not covered by the fees—such as meals, passport and visa fees, textbooks, and LCC term tuition. Financial aid is available for qualified students.

Included in the $3,500 is round trip airfare between Portland and London, living accommodations, medical and fee-refund insurance policies. The fee also includes membership fees to the University of London Student Union and Library, central zone travel pass, and an extensive weekly program of cultural and social activities.

Participants also have the option of a week-long tour in Western Europe, for an added $505.

Students are expected to take 12-credit hours for the term, choosing from seven different three-credit courses, including a mandatory "British Life and Culture" course, "Introduction to Intercultural Communication," "Contemporary World Economic Issues," "Survey of Theater Arts."

LCC is one of seven community colleges in Oregon which participate in the American Institute for Foreign Study (AIFS) program. LCC instructors have taught in the program—DeChaine, and Speech Instructor Mary Forestieri in 1989. This year Portland Community College Social Science Instructor Martin Haney and Rogue Community College Social Science Instructor Jerry Bryan will go to London as part of the program.

Applications are available from Forestieri or DeChaine, or in the Office of Instruction. Anyone with questions about the program should contact Forestieri, ext. 2481; or DeChaine, ext. 2480.

Mr. Bush has kept some of his promises. He did sign a new clean air bill and has reaffirmed his opposition to offshore drilling in California.

On the down side, this administration's opposition to worldwide efforts to stop ozone layer depletion has placed the U.S. in direct conflict with all of the other "Western democracies."

The "Education" President

The recent political flap over minority scholarships seems strange coming from the administration of an "education" president. The policy was announced by a black bureaucrat within the Department of Education who seemed surprised that his announcement would cause such a furor, and took full responsibility for formulating the policy.

The Department of Education, even when under the thumb of the mercurial William Bennett, seldom made policy announcements without Bush administration approval. Some black members of Congress, including Democrat Charles Rangel, believe the minority scholarship policy decision was more or less a "red herring" thrown to the public by high-level members of the Bush administration in order to gauge political fallout.

The War On Drugs

The "war on drugs" seems to have lost its glamour in light of the military buildup for Operation Desert Shield. However, last week the Bush administration released a study showing that cocaine use in the United States had dropped dramatically.

On further analysis, these statistics proved to be only one side of the story.

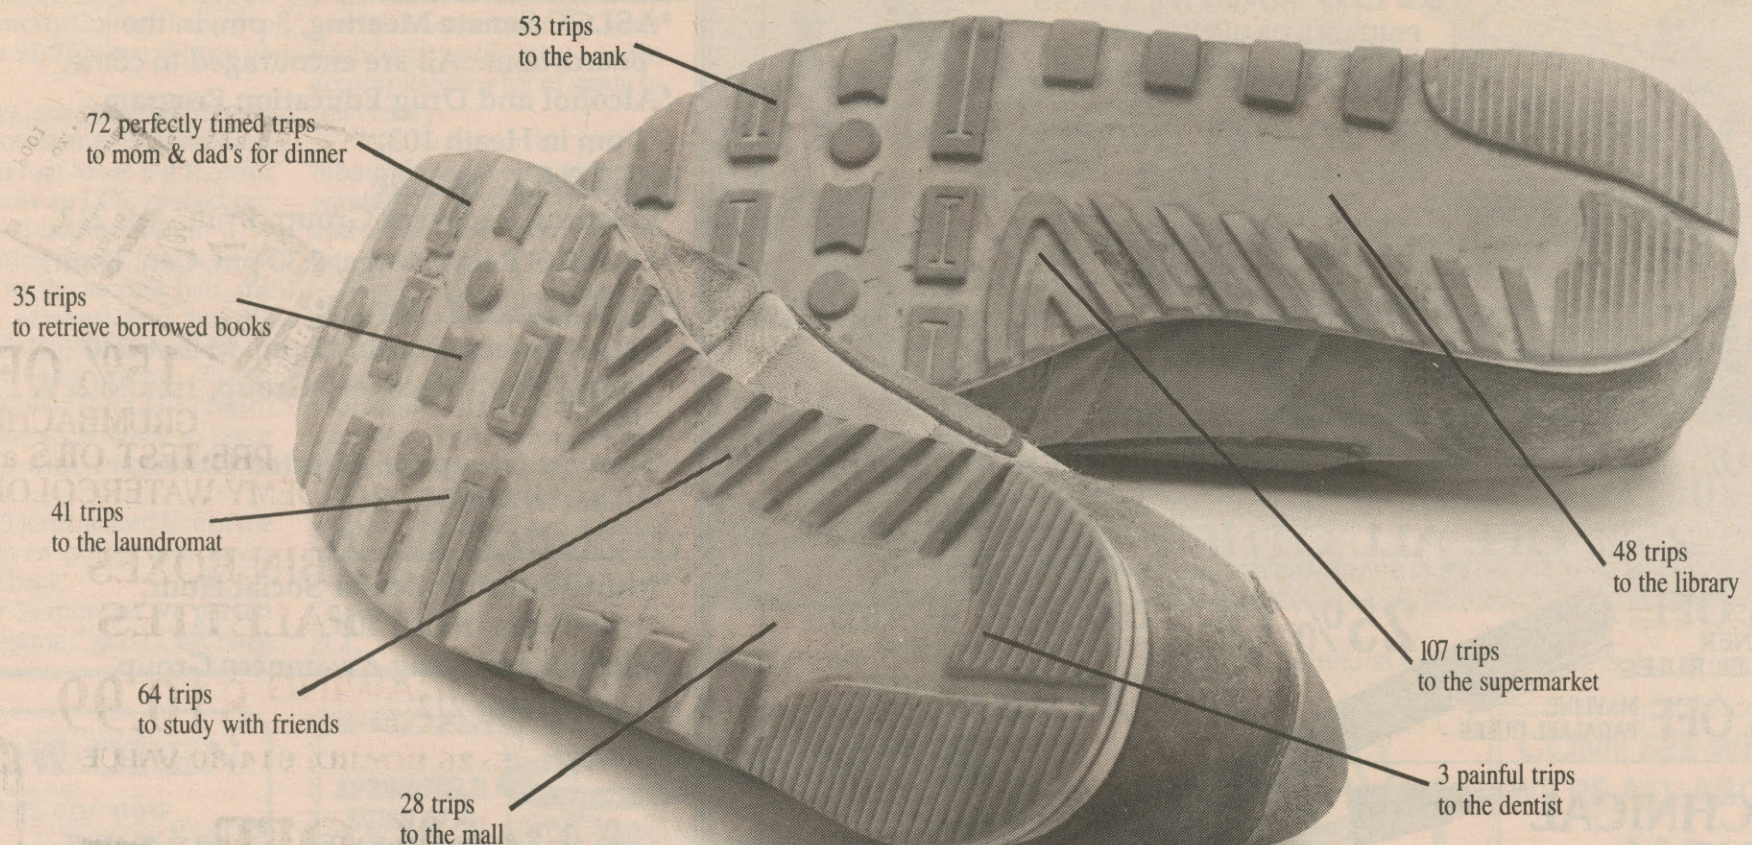

The study did not take into account drug usage in the inner-city areas of the U.S., nor did it account for the homeless or people caught in the criminal justice system. Now it doesn't take a genius to figure out that the survey was based mainly on law-abiding, middle to upper-middle class white people living in suburbia—a real hotbed of street-corner drug dealing, drive-by drug related shootings and drug-related high crime rates.

The survey also showed that while drug use was declining, addiction was increasing. In a war, this would seem to indicate fewer wounded and more deaths.

Taxes

On January 1, taxes rose on cigarettes, alcohol, luxury items and some income rates. So much for "no new taxes."

Mr. Bush is not the first president to renege on campaign promises (it has become a political pastime), however it would be nice if he kept one or two.

Concert to feature faculty musicians

by Tracy Brooks

Torch Entertainment Editor

The LCC Performing Arts Department will present a Chamber Music Concert, featuring three classical music selections performed by students and members of LCC's music faculty, on Thursday, Jan. 10 at 8 p.m., in the Blue Door Theater.

String instruments will dominate the concert, along with piano. Music Instructor Nathan Cammack is coordinating the event, in addition to performing on the viola.

Chamber music is a short ensemble, written to be played in a smaller, "more intimate" setting, says Cammack.

First on the program is the Piano Quartet in G Minor, by Wolfgang Mozart. Performing in this piece is Judith Leuck, violin, Cammack, viola, Instructor James Pelley, cello, and student Tamera Mortenson, piano.

Vocal instructor Eduard Toldra will direct the next piece, titled Four Spanish Songs. Darcy DeRuz will sing, accompanied by Mortenson on piano.

The third piece is the Piano Quintet, Op. 34 by Johannes Brahms, with Jean Glausi, violin, Amy Jo Butler, violin, Cammack, viola, Pelley, cello, and Mortenson, piano.

"We really want to provide a nice balance of musical and theatrical events and this satisfies that balance," says Myrna Seifert, audience development specialist. Seifert says this will be the first musical event to take place in the Blue Door Theatre since its renovation. "This is kind of unusual," she says.

This concert, she says, will give students an opportunity to see instructors in action, as well as experience a musical performance.

Tickets for the event are on sale for $6 for general admission at the Lane Box Office, the Hult Center Ticket Office, all Hult Center outlets, and Marketplace Books in the 5th Street Public Market.

Artist displays paintings at LCC

An exhibit featuring well known Oregon artist Henk Pander is currently on display in the LCC Art Department Gallery. The ASLCC sponsored exhibit, which went on display Jan. 2, will continue through Jan. 25.

The artist will give a slide-lecture discussing his work on Wednesday, Jan. 16, at 1 p.m. in Forum 308, followed by a reception at 2:30 p.m. in the Gallery, also sponsored by ASLCC.

Pander says his oil paintings mainly express "my own sense of trying to find out where I fit in the contemporary world." The paintings range in size from five by seven feet to eight by nine feet, and have a strong link to Dutch and European art, with which Pander was familiar as a child.

Pander's works include a series commissioned by NASA to document the Project Galileo Jupiter Probe, and a series of paintings commissioned by the state in 1982 of former Oregon governor Tom McCall. "Apollo I," from the NASA series, is being shown in the LCC exhibit.

Gallery Director Harold Hoy describes Pander as "a masterful painter. The imagery is unique — very strong," says Hoy.

The exhibit may be viewed Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Fridays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Apollo I (Kepler's Dogs)", oil on linen, is now on display in the LCC Gallery.

Men's team victorious in overtime against SWOCC

by Robert Catalano

Torch Sports Editor

Brian Miller scored 13 second half points and made two critical free throws late in the overtime period to lead the LCC Men's Basketball team to a 73-70 victory over the Southwest Oregon CC on Jan. 3.

The Titans played even with SWOCC during the first half and were only down 36-35 at intermission.

Then a blizzard blew into the LCC gym and the Titans went cold. Hitting only two free throws and one of 14 shots from the field the Titans trailed 55-40 with 9:21 remaining in the game.

Coach Bates called a time out and instructed his team to employ a full court press.

That began the Titan comeback.

"Once we went to the press, we forced a lot of errors," said Coach Bates. "Miller hit his three-pointers, Willis started to get into the game and it became a real team effort."

Miller hit a three-pointer to bring the Titans within one point at 62-61 and the Titan press forced three turnovers in the last 1:50 of the game to force overtime.

The Lakers scored the first three points of the overtime period but LCC answered with a Jay Willis three-pointer to tie the score at 68.

After SWOCC went ahead 69-68, Miller went to the line to try to put the Titans ahead. He missed the second of two free-throws and the game was tied at 69.

Willis put LCC ahead for good with two more charity stripe points at 71-70 with less than a minute to play.

The Lakers played for a single shot but were foiled by a smothering LCC defense.

With ten seconds to play, Miller was intentionally fouled by the Laker's Jim Kellar. Miller redeemed himself for his earlier miss in the period by swishing his two free throws and giving the Titans a three point lead.

The Titans harassed SWOCC on the inbounds pass and the Lakers were forced to throw up a prayer shot which LCC rebounded.

"I think I need something for my ulcer after this one," Coach Bates sighed, after the game.

The 9-3 Titans travel to Chemeketa CC for a game on Jan. 5, and to Roseburg for a game on Jan. 9, against Umpqua CC before returning on Jan. 12 for a home game against Clackamas CC.

Titan women win

The LCC women's basketball team withstood a furious comeback attempt by the Southwest Oregon Community College Lakers to notch a 91-87 home victory on Jan. 3.

Katy Carter hustled her way to 14 points and 5 rebounds in the first half to set the tone for the Titans as LCC rushed out to a 52-41 halftime lead.

Leading by as much as 20 points in the second half, the Titans relaxed and let the Lakers begin the comeback.

With the score 75-59, SWOCC went on a 23-11 run to make the score 86-82 in favor of LCC with 1:52 left in the game.

The Titans scored five of the next seven points and never looked back.

"For 36 minutes we played a great game," said LCC Coach

Dave Loos. "We practice how to beat the press all of the time, but when it came to the game we let it bother us and let them (SWOCC) get close."

Carter, who scored 20 points and shared LCC scoring honors with Kelli Stonelake and Carrie Redifer, said the team accomplished a lot of goals in the victory.

"We wanted to get 34 rebounds and we made 38. We wanted to cut down our fouls and shoot better from the foul line. We did all of those."

Nicole Bagnotti added 15 points for the Titans, while Carter, Lucy Cornutt and Bagnotti pulled down seven rebounds apiece. Every member of the Titans scored in the victory.

Kari Gregory led SWOCC with 10 rebounds and a game high of 26 points.

The 6-6 Titans next play Chemeketa CC on Jan. 5, at LCC.

Construction Tech builds housing for homeless

by Howard Parman

for the Torch

Pleased with past results, the St. Vincent de Paul Society asked LCC's Construction Technology Program to construct the frame of its second duplex for homeless families. Located at 78 Shady Loop Lane in Springfield, the duplex will house homeless or very low income families.

"Learning to frame new construction is why most people enroll in the program," says Hal Davis, Construction Tech. instructor.

St. Vincent de Paul broke ground on the $80,000 project on Dec. 13, 1990 and the work will be done during winter and spring terms.

Last term Construction Tech. students completed two projects for St. Vincent de Paul. One was remodeling apartments above the Society's Budget Store at 1880 W. 11th Ave. in Eugene. The other was framing and plastering the shower and laundry rooms at the Homeless Family Service Center at 3796 Franklin Blvd. in Glenwood.

"The projects would have cost a lot more without the LCC students," says Kevin Ko, Special Programs Coordinator for St. Vincent de Paul.

"The class saved us about $3,500 in labor on both projects."

The Duplex II project is funded by a combination of donations and financing. The City of Springfield donated the lot for the duplex. The Rotary Club of Eugene and the Springfield Board of Realtors donated cash. St. Vincent de Paul will donate the appliances and Pioneer 32 of Oregon is supplying all the cabinetry. The Rainbow Water District will donate the labor to install water service to the property. Key Bank of Oregon is financing the rest of the project at seven percent interest.

The Construction Tech. Program looks for publicly owned, non-profit construction projects to give students on-the-job training. Once Davis commits LCC to a project, the owner supplies the materials and the students supply the labor. Projects selected provide on-the-job training that complements classroom instruction.

Says Construction Tech. student John Zorich, "On-the-job training is twice as valuable as textbook learning. It gives you an insight as to what to expect on a job."

against Kawada unless it could prove financial liability. The board agreed to comply with Moskus' request until further information was gathered.

On Thursday, Jan. 3, Moskus said it appears that there has in fact been financial loss by the college due to the termination of the contract. Currently, he said, the best analysis of the loss totals somewhere near $45,000.

He added, however, that this is still only an estimate, and that further information needs to be gathered before determining a course of action.

Once this is complete, Moskus expects to first talk to Kawada about reimbursement, before approaching the board about legal action against the Japanese firm.

Moskus expressed relief that the matter is coming to a close. "I'm glad that this controversy has ended and we get on with doing what we do best, which is educating students," he said.

"I think it will work out in the best interest of LCC."
