Safety issues take front seat at new downtown station

Remote-controlled video cameras now keep watch; new police substation will open next month

Victor Runyan Lead Writer

Perhaps you, like many Lane Transit District users, have avoided the downtown station at night. Maybe it's fear, perhaps just caution, that keeps you away.

LTD is trying to address those concerns with its new transfer station, both in the design and in the rules created for the station.

The strongest move toward a safer environment is LTD Ordinance 36, which governs the conduct of people on or in LTD property.

Mark Pangborn, LTD assistant general manager, says the new station was designed with two types of safety in mind. One is safe use and access of the facility in day-to-day operations, including when changing buses, and when buses enter and exit the station. To assure safe conditions, LTD built the facility off the street, and limited motor traffic in the station to buses.

The other focus is on personal safety. This is a little more problematic, Pangborn says, because many of the issues are based on people's perceptions. Even in the old set-up, he says "There was no crime," but the message community members were giving LTD was that they didn't feel safe in the Downtown Station area.

He points out that LTD worked closely with the Eugene Police Department to design a station that meets the EPD's "Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design" standards. Some of the features built into the station include high levels of light and clear sight lines which don't allow places for people to hide.

LTD personnel's panoramic view of the entire station is augmented by 18 remote-controlled video cameras placed discreetly in "bubbles" throughout

New voting system awaits LCC students in May election

K. Bishop Staff Writer

Get ready to vote your preference.
Voters will use the preference system to elect ASLCC representatives during the upcoming LCC student government elections, held May 11-13. Voters in last year's election chose to implement the new system.

Preference voting is a type of proportional voting which attempts to give more representation to all voters. Instead of voting the usual, "one vote for the favored candidate" way, voters will rank the candidates, marking a "number one" next to their most preferred, a two next to their second, and so on. If voters' first choices are eliminated, then their votes go to their next choices, until a candidate is elected with a winning majority.

It can get more difficult than this, however, if students vote in a less than straightforward manner.

For example, in an election with five candidates, someone might rank the candidates with one "one," no "two," and then give the rest of the candidates fives. Or the ballot will be marked with a "one" and four "twos." The possibilities are numerous and some students say it is difficult to gauge the outcome of such voting.

At least one ASLCC senator expresses doubts about preference voting in the upcoming election.

Brian Tanner is not convinced that students will understand the new system well enough and, if confused, "voters will not know how to vote to their advantage and

Years of guiding turn into time of soul-searching for LCC employee

John Lloyd's end of the phone was initially silent when a reporter asked him for an interview about his rumored June retirement as consultant in LCC's Training & Development program.

"I'm not retiring," Lloyd replied vigorously. "I'm leaving, yes. But I'm not retiring. Why do people ask when I'm retiring?"

Later, Lloyd chuckled and added, "If I live to 120, then maybe I'll retire."

Rather than retiring, Lloyd is leaving Lane to continue his spiritual work with the Unity Church in Eugene where he's been a member for over 10 years. He was also recently accepted into ministerial school in Kansas City.

Back in 1990, when he was hired at Lane, he didn't know if he would be at the college even long enough to learn his way around the fourth floor of the Center Building.

A former co-worker from Looking Glass — who was in the Training & Development Department at Lane — asked Lloyd if he would be interested in teaching job search skills to dislocated Springfield Weyerhaeuser workers who had completed the Career & Life Planning class.

Lloyd agreed to take the position even though there was no guarantee the job would last beyond five months. He started work the first day of the 1990 fall term. After it became apparent that the federal government was going to fund services for dislocated workers, Lloyd applied for a permanent position and was hired as an Adult

Options are unlimited at this career workshop

Middle and high school girls to explore their career choices

> Laura Magnuson Staff Writer

Options Unlimited is presenting a "hands-on" exploration workshop about non-traditional fields of work for middle and high school girls. The workshop, originally scheduled for April 25, will take place May 2, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The conference, including over 22 hands-on sessions, gives participants an opportunity to have fun and learn while experiencing various projects.

These workshops will include making furniture, creating a tile mosaic, aviation maintenance, repairing cars, and building a dog house. Women working in nontraditional jobs will be available to share their experience and skills with the girls.

Women's Program Advisor Donna "LaRosa" Rose says, "The purpose of this event is to expose girls to a broad range of potential career interests as well as life empowering skills that they may never have considered for themselves."

Girls need to pre-register by April 24. Registration packets can be picked up at any Lane County middle or high school. Admission, bus passes and lunch are free. There will be door prizes, gifts and entertainment, and guests, including KUGN's Nancy Steele and players from the UO women's basketball team.

A session for parents and teachers on supporting girls in non-traditional careers is also included.

For more information on Options Unlimited, call ext. 2353.

"It's been a long and interesting, almost eight years now, that I've been doing this," he says in a barely detectable drawl. "The realization came as I continued to work with people on an individual basis that my own 'inner work,' my spiritual work ... was affecting other people. Not in what I said so much, but in how I said it.

"I am now doing what I helped people do for eight years," Lloyd continues. "But I am doing it myself. I don't have a Dislocated Worker Program to do that, and that's okay. But at 47 years old I am making a significant career change."

Another person who has made a significant career change is LCC student Jeff Stott, and he's done it with Lloyd's guidance. Stott says

Lloyd has led him through his first term in Lane's Dislocated Worker's Program, where he is studying diesel technolbusiness management.

"John's gone above and beyond," says Stott, with appreciation in his voice. "I would not be in school without his help. John's made it possible. I am forever grateful to him."

Lloyd's ability to get results has also been apparent to his long-time co-worker, Ann Nowicki, Employment and Training Consultant in the Training & Development Department.

"His foremost quality is he does what needs to be done for his clients," Nowicki said. "John is an extremely caring and compassionate advocate for all his clients in the Dislocated Worker's Program. We're going to miss him around here."

Stott provides an example of the qualities expressed by

"I told this to John," relates Stott. "A few days later I was on campus. There was John walking toward me, smiling and waving a piece of paper in the air. 'I got the money for your tools,' John said."

Lloyd has consistently encouraged a self-examining focus while questioning dislocated employees who have been laid off from perhaps the only jobs they had ever known.

"What is it you would have done if you weren't doing this?" he will ask. "If the wood products industry never existed, what would you have wanted to do? What's written on your heart that says, "This is what I'd really like to do?"

After years of asking that question of others, Lloyd said he's now asked the same of himself. And he has found what he wanted. He has discovered his calling.

Contrary to stereotypical notions, Lloyd said that calling wasn't revealed to him in a voice from above or a revelation, but as a gradual awareness of the positive impact he continued to have on people's lives from his inner spiritual work. He has found something he does well, a vocation "that would make my heart sing."

Stott speaks almost reverently about Lloyd's departure.

"Once in a lifetime you get a person like John in your life," he sums up with heartfelt conviction. They call it the Training and Development Department but they ought to call it the John Lloyd Cen-

But Pangborn stresses the devices aren't wired with audio microphones to snoop on conversations in the station. He says that would violate Oregon law which forbids third party taping of conversations.

LTD also contracts with Downtown Eugene, Inc. for the services of mall guides who enforce LTD rules on the property. A police substation was also built as part of the new facility.

The substation will employ a community service officer for administrative tasks, and one sworn police officer whose "beat" will be downtown Eugene. LTD is paying a third of the officer's salary, Eugene Downtown, Inc. is paying a third, and the city is picking up the

The final piece in making people feel safe in and around the station is LTD's ability to limit access to bus users only, says Pangborn. The new station is publicly owned, but it is also a "single-use facility." Because the station's only function is to serve passengers, LTD — which is also a public agency - can limit public access to that.

LTD officials reviewed how courts have interpreted the law, says Pangborn, and the group realized it is easier to show a need to restrict activity on single-use property than multiple-use areas like streets.

After determining it could restrict uses of the new station, LTD then wrote its Ordinance 36 to spell out the rules for users. Among the activities LTD won't allow are speechmaking, signature gathering, and pamphlet distribution. The ordinance won't be enforced in the plaza on the corner of Olive and 10th Streets, because LTD wanted to make a "pocket park" for people to be able to simply sit and relax, says Pangborn.

At least one long time bus rider appreciates the changes at the new facility. Barbara Schoen has been using the transit system since the city used Volkswagen buses in the 60s. She has witnessed several downtown LTD stations come and go, she says, but the new one is impressive.

Conversational Partners needed for LCC international students

John Dreiling News Editor

Students have an opportunity to learn about another culture, in a sense, "travel" to a distant land, without even leaving the area.

An LCC program called Conversation Partners pairs up international students with American students, says Sandy Penfield, coordinator of the International Students Community Program. Currently there are seven pairs meeting regularly, with a waiting list of seven more international students needing a partner.

Pairs are asked for a minimum commitment of one hour a week, she adds.

"The main purpose is to improve the English of the person to whom English is their second language," she says. "A lot of the

"Our biggest problem is getting... students, whose English is their first language, to participate," she laments.

Penfield says the Conversation Partners program is also a benefit to the American students who get involved.

"It brings diversity to their lives. They learn about another culture. They potentially learn to enhance a language they might be learning in college," she says. "Right now we don't have much interaction between the Americans and the international students, and I think that that is not a good thing."

Interested students can contact Penfield by calling 747-4501, ext. 2165, or visiting the ISCP office in 414 CEN.

Multi-cultural Center and ISCP differ on 'English-only' rule

John Dreiling News Editor

While California voters decide whether to require immigrant children to receive schooling in English or with a translation, LCC is experiencing its own language debate.

The International Students Community Program office has an English-only rule for the international students who work or hang out there, while the Multi-Cultural Center allows students to speak any language while spending time there.

Because of the small size of the ISCP office, the two offices may soon be combined into one larger one, says ISCP coordinator Sandy Penfield, meaning that a compromise may be in

To be truly multi-cultural and international, the bond is that they all know how to speak English and they're all here to be educated," Penfield says.

"That's the thing that brings us together. That's the tie, the English," she adds.

But, Sandy Young, who works in the Multicultural Center, says she supports the center's allowance of other languages because of the multicultural, relaxed emphasis of the office.

"It's a multicultural center. It's a diverse culture," Young says. "Make that person comfortable. That's what this place is."

International student Atsushi Kubota, who works in the ISCP office, says that the English-only rule makes sense because of the educational goal of the international students.

"People from other countries come here to learn English and if they build an environment where they only speak their own language, that's just going to be a disadvantage," he says.

Kate Huang, an international student who also works in the ISCP office, says, "I personally feel that speaking a different language in front of other people, it just separates people."

Of the students who frequent her program's office, Penfield says, "They have a hard time when they're around students of the same language and culture because it's just easy to revert back. It's easier to speak their own language than English."

that candidates will not understand the system well enough to know how to strategize."

He is also concerned that if two candidates are fighting it may institute guidelines to eliminate "none" voting and may limit voters to only being able to vote in numerical order. In addition, it will discuss the use of an "x" system for people who don't understand preference voting; voters could just mark "x" for their favorite candidate and it will be counted as a one vote.

Former Eugene City Council member Kevin Hornbuckle is a preference voting advocate and explained the system to the Senate at its April 13 meeting. He believes the new method will improve voter turnout on the LCC campus and it will encourage students to vote in future elections.

> to voting, he points out. For instance, had preference voting been in place during the last presidential election, people could have voted for Ralph Nader or Ross Perot, knowing that if one were eliminated, the vote would have transferred to a more popular candidate. In other words, voters wouldn't lose their vote.

"lesser of two evils" approach

Since preference voting will only be used in situations where there are more than two candidates per seat, Armanino predicts that it might be relevant in just three or four races.

Leanna Stacachrot of the Student Resource Center has reservations about the switch to preference voting and the upcoming election. She says that it will be difficult to "get the dents about the system in time.

In addition, she argues that preference voting was ill-presented last year as a way of increasing voter turnout. The Senate debated the issue in the late stages of the final meeting before elections, Stacachrot is not sure people understood it all that well when they voted for it.

It was a "new and exciting idea," she says and thinks people said, "'Hey, this is different; let's try this.'

Armanino however, is more positive about preference voting and he says it will stir up more interest and discussion of the upcoming elections. He also sees it as "a great tool for learning about a new type of voting."

So, like it or not, preference voting is here, say its proponents. And since voter turnout for LCC elections has been so low in year's past - only 324 students voted out of approximately 9,000 last year — they will work to encourage more people to turn out and give it a try.

Get a bit of knowledge with each nugget

So many names and faces to laud or lambaste, yet so little space...

Herewith is a tidy opinion piece I like to call "Darts and Laurels." Named after Stan Laurel and Oliver...nah, just kidding. The idea, as I pointed out in a past column, is taken from the Columbia Journalism Review. The CJR normally either praises or damns media in its format, but my approach is broader.

Just think of each following paragraph as a tasty snack: not very substantive, but it fills a spot in the recommended daily allowance for knowledge. Consider them Knowledge McNuggets.

Bon appetit.

Dart: to the federal government for its nearsighted approach to the socalled "needle exchange" program, which is designed to help fight the spread of HIV.

The system is set up to allow drug addicts to swap dirty needles for clean ones. Over 110 needle exchanges are set up in 22 states, and on April 20 Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shahala declared the program a success. Her scientific studies show that not only does the needle exchange help reduce the rate of HIV in communities, it also encourages addicts to seek drug treatment and rehabilitation measures.

Then, in a face slap that reverberated across the country, the Clinton administration refused to fund the program with federal tax dollars. AIDS activists are justifiably outraged at the decision, which sounds politically motivated. Once again, the White House seemingly caved to pressure from conservative groups, which apparently oppose anything that sounds humanitarian.

Is there a spine replacement program out there for the President?

In conjunction with the National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness, the LCC chapter of OSPIRG mobilized over 30 pairs of helping hands in an effort to beautify our community and support the disadvantaged. Several LCC groups "competed" to outdo each other in this work-a-thon, which raised money across the nation. In all, the Lane teams helped raise over $1,500 for the cause of ending world hunger and homelessness.

Other campus organizations deserving of laurels include the Multi-Cultural Center and ASLCC Senators.

Dart: to last year's creators and this year's proponents of preference voting, the convoluted system that faces Lane students in the May elections. If you have read about preference voting and still don't quite understand how it works, say an amen brother or sister, because I'm with you.

What is this, voting for algebra geeks? Rank your candidates? If your first choice fails to make the cut, your vote gets shifted to your second choice? If x + y=7, then y=?

Excuse me, but is the traditional system of marking your choice and then moving on to the next race that unfair and outdated? Proponents say the newfangled way is going to increase voter turnout. That remains to be seen, but if nothing else, our logic skills will get a nice workout.

TRIO/SSS program grants assistance

Shari Harbarger A&E Editor

Thanks to a federal grant awarded to LCC last fall, some students have a new advantage in pursuing their educational

Students who plan to graduate from Lane or go on to four-year colleges may find extra help in the TRIO/Student Support Services program.

To be considered, students must also fall under one or more of the following criteria: Their parents did not earn four-year degrees while the students were living at home; they are financial aid recipients; they have documented disabilites.

TRIO/SSS is funded by the U.S. Department of Education and Lane became a beneficiary of $720,000 after grants coordinator Sarah Ulerick submitted an application, with the assistance of faculty throughout the campus.

The grant is available for four years, beginning in the fall of 1997, and the new staff is enthusiastic about putting together the program for LCC students.

"We focus on whatever would help students graduate or transfer," says interim grant director Lynne Swift.

TRIO/SSS, as a part of the Counseling Department, will sponsor workshops, tutoring in specific subjects (i.e. science and math), academic advising, and field trips to four-year college campuses, and more. The details in each area will be determined by participants' needs. TRIO/SSS will also be a referral service and is far from a repitition of what's already out there. TRIO/SSS coordinates basic information, saving students from galloping all over campus to get assistance.

Though still in its infancy at LCC, the program is taking shape quickly, to the delight of staff members. So far, about 30 students are enrolled; Swift says the goal for this year is 80 students, plus another 80 in Fall '98 and increasing each term. Two computers are currently available to TRIO/SSS students in the study room in CEN 321 and tutor coordinator Liz Coleman says that eventually there will be an additional two computers and a printer for participants to work with.

The service's staff at LCC is enthusiatic about helping individuals achieve their goals, and look forward to assisting students, whether through mentoring, coordinating study groups or providing a friendly ear.

For more information or to pick up an application, call Pam Soine at 747-4501, ext. 3131, or visit the TRIO/SSS office in CEN 321.

Students honored at Capitol

John Dreiling News Editor

Two LCC students, Phi Theta Kappa members Danny Armanino and Mitch Allison, were honored by Gov. John Kitzhaber April 10 for academic acheivement and community service.

Each community college in Oregon was represented by two students.

Armanino says that Kitzhaber met each representative in his publicity office. This was followed by a luncheon attended by the student representatives, various state senators and representatives, several community college officials, all of the community college presidents including Moskus, and several community college board members including LCC Board Member Pat Riggs.

"Danny was selected, it's pretty obvi- ASLCC President Danny Armanino ous, he is the president of the... student body, so he has a lot of track record of service and participation in the community," says Velma Jesser, Phi Theta Kappa advisor, who selected the two student representatives which were ratified by LCC President Jerry Moskus.

"Mitch Allison was selected because he had a very high grade point. He's a representative of the student body in that he is very studious, he's very dedicated, he's very conscientious. He's typical of the community college students because he did not come to the college directly after high school," she says.

"I'm just really proud of both of these guys. They're just very special people," she adds.

"It's a great honor. I'm very pleased to be honored at this level by the school, by the people involved in the selection process, by the governor of the state. It's nothing that I would expect," says Armanino.

LCC and UO send crews to clean up Lane hunger

Judy L. Sierra Managing Editor

Coerced, in part, by the blue skies and bright sun, 30 LCC students participated in the 14th Annual Hunger cleanup April 18. The group volunteered at local organizations which help homeless and hungry people in Lane County.

The Eugene community raised $1,500 to benefit local agencies and organizations, says Merriah Fairchild.

A total of 140 students from LCC and UO worked at 17 different sites. LCC students offered their time at Habitat for Humanity, Birth to Three and Grassroots Gardens.

Several LCC organizations sent teams, including OSPIRG, the Multi-Cultural Center, and ASLCC senators.

Fairchild worked at the Grassroots Garden, a community garden where food is grown for hungry people in Lane County.

"We made four raised-bed gardens which were about 80 feet long, and we filled them with soil, hay, grass and manure. Then I got to plant broccoli," she LCC Student Gen Steier worked at the Habitat for Humanity site in Springfield.

"We got to clean out the debris from the houses they're building," she says. smoothed gravel for the driveway they're putting in and we even built a wall."

The volunteers met at the UO ERB Me-

Titans locked in a late-season division battle

Donald Smalley Sports Editor

Every baseball fan loves a good pennant race and there is one brewing in the Southern Division of the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges.

As of April 23, the Titans (8-5) are in second place, only one-half game behind the Linn-Benton Roadrunners (8-4).

The Titans held the first place spot for a few days, but the Lakers of Southwestern Oregon came to town April 21 and forged a split with the Titans. Coupled with a LBCC sweep over Chemeketa, the Roadrunners propelled themselves to first.

Lane kept its hold on the top spot for a while by defeating the Lakers 3-1 in the opener. Three solo homeruns powered the Titan offense. The first coming in the first inning by sophomore first baseman Tim Dryden. The blast was his 12th of the year.

Sophomore outfielder Rudy Butler pushed the lead to 2-0 with a crank over the fence in left-center field; his fourth of the season. After SWOCC pulled within 2-1 by scratching out a run on wild pitch in the top of the 8th, freshman infielder Mark Hernandez gave the Titans an insurance run in the bottom of the inning for the final tally of 3-1.

Freshman starter Corky Wray anchored the pitching with six shutout innings, striking out six. Sophomore James Atwood earned his second save of the year.

But the pitching wasn't there in the second game, however. The Lakers' bats woke up and SWOCC defeated Lane 10-6.

"I don't know what is the matter with us," Head Coach

Donny Harrel said afterwards. "We need to get it going."

Lane had trouble getting it going April 18 in the opener of the Chemeketa twinbill. The Chiefs gave the Titans a dose of their own medicine with a 11-2 drubbing.

"We need to develop consistent starting pitching," Harrel says.

"Our walks are going up," says pitcher Jesse Spradley. "We need to cut those down, come together and refocus as a team for the stretch run."

The Titans seemed to come together in the nightcap by relying on their superior hitting ability to come away with a 7-3 triumph. That victory put Lane back in first place (for a while), a position this photo by Bobbette Chichmanian team expects to be in.

LCO's Ryan George cracks a hit in the

April 21 game against SWOC

"The Southern Division is the toughest in the NWAACC,' Harrel says. "It shows in the nonleague records and the two teams that represent the division in the post-season tournament should do very well."

Two days before the split with the Chiefs, the Titans travelled up to Clackamas to make up a game that was previously rained out earlier in the season. The Titans' hitting once again was enough for a 12-4 decision.

Lane's division quest continues April 25 with a pair at home with Clackamas. Then on April 28, the Titans conclude the homestand with a single game with Mt. Hood.

Lane Community College hosted the Twilight track and field meet April 17, with competitions held on the LCC campus. The Titan men and women won numerous individual events and each team won the 4X400 relay race.

The Titans' next meet is April 25 in Monmouth, Ore. for the Western Oregon Open. LCC hosts the NWAACC heptathlon/decathlon meet on April 27-28.

Neiman-Marcus cookie recipe price jars mom into giving it out

Shari Harbarger A&E Editor

You've probably heard the story of the Texas lady who inadvertently paid $250 for a recipe, then decided to share it with the world. You might also have heard this story was made up.

Contrived or not, the Neiman-Marcus Cookie recipe makes an easy, deliciously sinful treat— and lots of it. Here, for your reading (and baking) pleasure, is the original story and the recipe.

My daughter and I had just finished a salad at the Neiman-Marcus Cafe in Dallas and decided to have a small dessert. Because our family are such cookie lovers, we decided to try the 'Neiman-Marcus Cookie'. It was so excellent that I asked for the recipe.

The counter girl replied with a small frown, "I'm afraid not."

"Well," I said, "could I buy the recipe?"

With a cute smile, she agreed. When I asked how much the recipe was, she responded, "Two-fifty."

"Just add it to my tab," I said approvingly.

Thirty days later, I received my VISA statement from Neiman-Marcus, which had a balance of $285! I remembered that I had only spent $9.95 for the two salads and about $20 for a scarf; however, at the bottom of the statement was a line reading 'Cookie Recipe- $250'. Boy, was I upset!

called Neiman's accounting department and told them that the waitress had quoted me at 'twofifty'— I didn't realize she'd meant $250 for a cookie recipe. I asked whether I could return the recipe and have my bill reduced. The representative apologized, saying the recipes were expensive so not just anyone could duplicate their bakery recipes; the bill would stand as it was. I was quiet for a moment, wondering how I could get even or get my money back.

Finally I said, 'Okay, you folks got my $250; now I'm going to have $250 worth of fun.' I proceeded to tell her that I was going to see to it that every cookie lover can have a $250 cookie recipe for free. When the representative said she wished I wouldn't do this, I replied, 'I'm sorry, but this is the only way I feel I can get even, halved.)

So, the recipe is as follows: (Measurements may be

Neiman-Marcus Cookies

- 2 cups butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 5 cups blended oatmeal
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 1 8-ounce chocolate candy bar, grated
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 3 cups chopped nuts(your choice, optional)
- 4 cups flour
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- 24 ounces chocolate chips
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 eggs
- 2 teaspoons baking soda

Measure oatmeal and process in blender to a fine powder. Cream butter and both sugars. Add eggs and vanilla; mix together with flour, oatmeal salt, baking powder and baking soda. Add chocolate chips, grated candy bar and nuts. Roll into balls and place two inches apart on a cookie sheet. Bake for 10 minutes at 375 degrees. (Full recipe makes 112 cookies.)

Justin Armstrong and Kati Macartney are ready for the April 23 special preview performance. The LCC performance will run through May 9. Purchase tickets by phone - 726-2202 or at ticket outlets.

LCC EVENTS

Reserve your place now at the Actors Cabaret of Eugene to see the new Bottom Rung Comedy Troupe! This collision (I mean collaboration) of former LCC theatre students presents its first public offering April 24, at 8 p.m. This little cafe fills up quickly - come early for best seating. $5 gets you in the door. For more info call 683-4368.

Beginning April 27, the Art Department Gallery will be showing handcrafted works by Lane studio assistants. Walter Teichman, William Merrill, and David Hinman display their skills honed in LCC's arts programs. Come see their expressions in stoneware, metalwork, and jewelry Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m.

Speaking of ACE, auditions for the upcoming play "Hair" are still under way. This stylin' production is looking for ten men and ten women; comb through your collection of short songs and buzz on down there May 2 at 1 p.m.

W.O.W. HALL EVENTS

Jonesin' for ska? Check out Easy Big Fella, Red Session and The Accelerators on April 24. Shake yer butt to lifegiving sounds from Seattle, Honolulu and Eugene. This KWVA-sponsored event commences at 9:30 p.m. Admission is $6; half-price for children ages 6-11 accompanied by a parent or guardian. Call 687-2746 for your fix.

The UO Campus Radio station also welcomes Lee "Scratch" Perry April 26. The reggae deity cranks it out along with The Mad Professor and The Robotiks starting at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $18 (half-price for chaperoned kids 6-11) and available at the following locations: CD World, EMU Main Desk, House of Records, La Triendita & Taco Loco, the Record Exchange, and the WOW Hall. Adult refreshments will be available at the performance (with valid ID, of course).

In collaboration with 91.9 KRVM, the WOW Hall proudly presents Gypsy Legends: A Dance Journey on April 25. Many representative styles from around the world will be performed, from northern Indian Kathak to American-style belly dancing. Tickets are $10, in advance and at the door; the show begins at 8:30 p.m.

COMMUNITY EVENTS

On May 2, the Hult Center will be graced by the legendary Victor Borgé, comedian/ pianist. This "timeless entertainer" delights all ages with his wit, musical talent, and "Phonetic Punctuation." Tickets may be purchased for the 8 p.m. performance at the Hult Center Ticket Office, the EMU Main Desk, or Charge-by-Phone at 682-5000. (Student discounts available with valid student ID.) It'll be worth it!

Also at the Hult is the choral presentation "American Spirit." The Eugene Concert Choir and The Eugene vocal Arts Ensemble come together to celebrate North American works such as "Epitaph for Moonlight" and "Alleluia" at 7:30 p.m. on April 25. Ticket prices vary, from $8 to $21 — ask about student discounts.

"Cartoon junkies" unite! The first annual Motion Graphics, Animation, and Arts Festival continues at Cafe Paradiso. From student projects to professional offerings, this show has something for everyone. And most of them are only a few minutes in duration, which makes it easy on the ol' attention span. Shows on April 23 & 24 begin at 8:30 p.m.; if the Cafe feels like charging, it'll run about a buck. Bon appetit!
