The LCC Library's Newsletter for Faculty
Fall 2023

New Library Website; Instructional Videos Updated

You have probably already noticed that the Library has a new website. Accordingly, we have updated and revised our collection of short Library instructional videos. If you have a more specific need, Library faculty would be happy to make a customized video for your class, focused on your students' research task. To get started, please contact your Liaison Librarian. Here is just a short selection:

- LCC Library Website Tour \(5:41\)
A brief tour of the highlights of the LCC Library's website.
- The LCC Library Online Catalog \(5:10\)
Describes how to find books, ebooks, DVDs, and streaming video in the LCC Library catalog. Also describes how to request Summit items.
- Using a Research Database \(8:22\)
Describes how to use EBSCO Library research databases to find articles.

Study Jam with Pizza and Therapy Dogs!

The Library is hosting Study Jam with tutors, advising, therapy dogs, yoga relaxation techniques, and free pizza/drinks for students. This term the event is on Tuesday, November 28 from 2-4 pm. Please help the Library promote this popular event for students!

LinkedIn Learning for Students or Professional Dev.

Use LinkedIn Learning (formerly known as Lynda.com) to acquire new professional or personal skills. LinkedIn Learning is a collection of online video courses taught by industry experts in software, creative, and business skills. You can browse through an overview of their content here. There are some surprising courses, including our most popular, "Grammar Foundations." Link to individual items, or embed entire LinkedIn Learning courses into your Moodle class. Sponsored by the LCC Library. Instructors should contact the Academic Technology Center (atc@lanecc.edu) for help incorporating LinkedIn Learning items into Moodle.

November is Native American Heritage Month

Please stop by the Library (in the Center Building) to view a display of books on Native American and Indigenous art. From beadwork and murals, to painting and live performance, Native artists explore both heritage and contemporary issues of representation and belonging. View the online records of the books on display.

In addition to the art book display, we're highlighting the work of Sean Sherman, an Indigenous chef and author who's a recipient of a James Beard award, the Julia Child award, and a TIME 100 most influential people in 2023. His cooking style is based on North American pre-colonial food systems. Sherman's cookbook, "The Sioux Chef's Indigenous Kitchen" is available through the Library in print and online. We also recommend "Sean Sherman's 10 Essential Native American Recipes," from the New York Times. (If you encounter a paywall, sign up for a Library-sponsored NYTimes account.) Cook a Sioux Chef recipe this November!

Lastly, take a look at "This IS Kalapuyan Land," an online exhibit of art and educational resources that asks viewers to think critically about Indigenous representation in non-Indigenous institutions.
